By DAVID LELAND

A MAN characterized by Carmel police as "despondent" over a recent separation from his estranged wife, shot and critically wounded her and killing her male friend early Monday morning before committing suicide in the parking lot of the Coachman's Inn on San Carlos Street in Carmel.

Salinas resident John Chester Stephens, 62, ambushed Julie Socorro Stephens, 47, and John Albert Wade, 60, with a volley of seven shots as they sat in Wade's cream-colored Mercedes at 7:23 a.m., killing Wade instantly and critically wounding his wife before turning a .22-caliber rifle on himself, dying instantly from a single gunshot wound to the chest.

"He didn't say a word," said Carmel Police Det. Sgt. Pete Poitras, adding that the attack lasted between 20 and 30 seconds. "He just jumped out with a shotgun and started blasting away."

Mrs. Stephens was taken to Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula where she underwent 10 hours of surgery for gunshot wounds to the chest, abdomen, thigh and arms. At press time her condition was listed as serious but stable.

Mrs. Stephens works as maid supervisor and Wade had worked as desk clerk at the Coachman's Inn for the past two years. Wade had picked up Stephens at her mother's house in Monterey; the two were arriving for work at the time of the shooting.

Poitras said that Stephens apparently believed that Wade was responsible for the breakup of the couple's nine-month-old marriage. There is no evidence, however, to support such a theory.

"We don't believe that Wade was the lover," Poitras said. "He may have wanted to be, but he wasn't."

A jealous Stephens got into a "physical altercation" with Wade Sept. 1 when he went to see his estranged wife at the Coachman's Inn.

Poitras said that while police responded to the scene, no arrests were made at that time and the matter was turned over to the district attorney's office, which decided not to pursue the matter.

"It wasn't a big deal," he said. "There was no real violence; no one was really the aggressor."

DRIVING A late model Pontiac rented from Avis to the Coachman's Inn, Stephens apparently had planned the attack at least one day before the shooting, according to police.

On Sunday, Sept. 16, according to a sales slip police found in his car, Stephens had purchased a 12-gauge shotgun from Big Five Sporting Goods in Salinas – it is unclear when he bought the .22-caliber rifle.

Stephens' white Toyota pickup truck was discovered by investigators at the Monterey Peninsula Airport, where he had left it when he rented the Pontiac.

"He may have planned to flee or had suicide in mind, we'll never know," said Poitras, adding that Mrs. Stephens had been granted a restraining order against her husband from Monterey County Superior Court Sept. 5. "She was on her guard."

Poitras added that Mr. Stephens likely had never been served with the restraining order because he had been visiting relatives in Clovis, near Fresno.

After he pulled his car behind the one carrying his wife and her friend, Stephens approached the passenger side of the car and fired two shotgun blasts at his wife.

"She put her arms up as a reflex," Poitras said. "It probably saved her life."

Mrs. Stephens tried to run from the scene into the motel laundry room; a trail of blood led from the car up the stairs to a second-story balcony where paramedics found her on a bench shortly after the shooting.

Stephens then fired two No. 8 buckshots at Wade from the passenger side of the car, then went to the other side of the car, firing another blast at Wade through the window.

He then grabbed his .22-caliber rifle from the back of the Pontiac and fired two more shots at Wade before turning the gun on himself. In all, Stephens shot at Wade five times, hitting the victim each time.

Later, stunned motel guests sat in silence on the balcony lodge as police conducted their investigation.

"I've lived in Chicago all of my life and I've never seen anything like this," said a guest who wanted to remain anonymous.

As investigators worked the crime scene, the muzzle of the .22-caliber rifle could be seen sticking out from under the light blue blanket that covered Stephens' body. Stephens' hand, clutched in a half-fist, could also be seen protruding from the blanket.

Wade's body lay just a few feet away under a flowered sheet, just inches from the open front door of his car.

Strong support by public boosts protection of bay

By SUSAN BECK

REP. LEON Panetta is finally winning a long-fought battle to protect the Monterey Bay for future generations.

His fight reached a peak in the first of three public hearings on the proposed Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary, an historic event that was likened to the discovery of Monterey in 1542, according to Sam Karas, chairman of the Monterey County Board of Supervisors.

Panetta was in Washington, D.C. at the time of the Sept. 12 hearing, but his wife, Sylvia, read the representative's comments to an audience of more than 300 people at the Monterey Conference Center.

His career in Congress began 14 years ago, and so did his efforts to designate the Monterey Bay as a marine sanctuary, thus the hearing was an event long anticipated, Panetta said.

Panetta said that he hoped that the proposed sanctuary would not only serve to preserve the unique and sensitive environment of the bay but also provide a means for protecting the vital resource that a large segment of the commmunity depends on for their livelihood.

"This is my home and my district. Monterey Bay is part of my life, and I want to ensure that it is preserved forever as a part of the lives of our children," said Panetta.

More than 100 elected federal, state, and local officials, along with residents from every city on the Monterey Peninsula voiced their opinions to officials representing the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) in Washington, D.C.

Most of the comments were about the sanctuary's possible boundaries, and the recently released Draft Environmental Impact Statement and Management Plan.

Sanctuary boundaries proposed by Washington cover 2,200 square miles, from Julia Pfeiffer Burns State Park in Big Sur to Pescadero Point in San Mateo County, and extend 60 miles offshore. This would position Monterey Bay as the largest of nine such sanctuaries in the United States.

'This is my home and my district. Monterey Bay is part of my life, and I want to ensure that it is preserved forever as a part of the lives of our children.'

– Rep. Leon Panetta

Most of the speakers, including members of the board of supervisors, preferred an alternate boundary that included 3,800 square miles of the Pacific, extending protection from Cambria in San Luis Obispo County to the Farallones National Marine Sanctuary along the Marin County coast.

The larger boundary incorporates the coastlines along Monterey, Santa Cruz, San Mateo and San Francisco counties.

State Sen. Henry J. Mello (D-Watsonville) endorsed the larger boundary because it would, "provide the most comprehensive and complete protection to our shoreline and coastal resources

Hatton Canyon Coalition report points to problems at CV Road

By DAVID LELAND

A TERSE traffic report released this week by the Hatton Canyon Coalition, Inc. paints a bleak picture of traffic on Highway 1 in years to come.

To no one's surprise, the principal culprit lies at the intersection of Carmel Valley Road and Highway 1, where traffic remains at a virtual standstill during peak hours.

"The report tells us we have a problem," said an understated Skip Lloyd, chairman of the coalition. "This (study) is a baseline for establishing credibility."

Composed by Wilbur Smith Associates, a traffic engineering and transportation planning firm under contract with the coalition, the report attempts to form "an objective assessment of future traffic conditions with respect to the Caltrans proposal and to evaluate other possibilities."

Caltrans' plans call for a highway through Hatton Canyon, with interchanges at Carpenter Street and Carmel Valley Road. A new bridge will also be built over the Carmel River.

The coalition is a citizens group formed in 1989 to seek a solution to the traffic problems on Highway 1. While the group is not currently endorsing a design, it believes that any highway should be compatible with the natural setting of the Carmel area and cause the least environmental damage.

Copies of the report have been placed in the public libraries of Carmel, Pacific Grove and Monterey, as well as with concerned public agencies.

Lloyd said it is essential that the large number of projects in Carmel Valley relying on construction of the Hatton Canyon Freeway be taken into consideration.

"(Potential) growth in Carmel Valley will be one of the main contributors to the traffic situation on Highway 1," he said.

'The report tells us we have a problem. This (study) is a baseline for establishing credibility.'

– Skip Lloyd

Under the guidelines of the Carmel Valley Master Plan Supplemental EIR, a net addition of 849 dwelling units (an increase of 14 percent); 258 hotel rooms (an increase of 54 percent); and 453,000 square feet of commercial space (an increase of 50 percent) could be added in the coming years.

Interested parties have three weeks to make comments to be contained in the final draft of the document, Lloyd said.

In addition, the coalition is moving ahead with working out conceptual designs for alternative solutions to the Hatton Canyon Freeway proposed by Caltrans.

Design work will be performed by Skidmore, Owings and Merrill and is scheduled for completion sometime in late fall, Lloyd said.

Beauty of small

Dear Editor:

A few weeks ago you ran a letter from Linda L. Smith about the beauty of "small," and the Carmel that used to be. I cut it out and saved it since it was just about the loveliest piece of prose that's ever appeared in your "letters" section.

I wish I had written sooner, but the days got away from me. Perhaps you might publish the date that Ms. Smith's letter ran, and those who missed it can look it up at the library.

Stimulates reading

Dear Editor:

In light of the letters you have recently published which criticize the Park Branch of the Harrison Memorial Library, I would like to express some positive thoughts regarding same.

It is my opinion through observation that the staff work very hard to create a "user friendly" environment which stimulates children to learn about books and the knowledge that can be gained from reading. My own small children are avid readers and they thoroughly enjoy visiting the library as often as possible.

The many varied programs offered at the Park Branch such as the summer reading program, story hour and visiting entertainment, have helped to create a unique warm atmosphere that makes our children feel right at home at the library.

When a public library creates an atmosphere which children love to visit there should be applause and recognition for this asset to our community. I would like to thank Sandy and her staff at the Park Branch for making reading something the children of Carmel can look forward to.

Sic transit sentiment

Dear Editor:

In time to come should Lincoln Steffens be moved to haunt his old Carmel abode, he wouldn't stand the ghost of a chance of being able to identify it. With its new high profile — yes, it will have put on a lot of weight — Palladian windows, and not so much as a board or a bat to guide him, he'll return dejectedly to whence he came.

Its new possessor has plans, duly blest by the requisite blessers, to alter it beyond Steffens' or anyone else's recognition. I suppose the solid bronze tablet, affixed to a rock outside the fence commemorating his years of residence there will be sold for scrap metal, or simply tossed into the recycling bin.

Sic transit sentiment for Carmel's lustrous denizens of yore! Cornelis Botke, Jessie Arms Botke and Howard K. Smith, former far-famed "artists in residence" are others whose dejection would equal if not surpass Steffens' own.

Sloping risks

Dear Editor:

With the inflation of Carmel real estate values, houses are now being built on lots that used to be considered unbuildable. A case in point is the Probasco application that was being heard by the Carmel Planning Commission on Sept. 12.

As a Carmel resident, at that hearing I urged that the planning commission, in considering applications to build on these marginal lots, keep in mind the serious problem of slope stability when a large, heavy structure is built on a steep hill.

The planning commission had given the Probascos preliminary approval to build two houses on property overlooking Mission Trail on an extremely steep slope. Its grade, I understand, averages 54 degrees, meaning that parts of it are a good deal steeper.

For over a year, these people have worked conscientiously to make whatever changes in their plans the commission has required. Their designs are very attractive. But when you stand at the bottom of that steep clay hill and look up, and then visualize cutting into the clay to make terraces on which two large, heavy houses will be built, don't you wonder what will happen to them during an extremely wet rainy season such as we had in 1983?

Can't you see that clay soil becoming saturated and a whole section of the hill sliding down onto Mission Trail, houses and all? That's what happened in 1983 to a house on a hill overlooking the Carmel Valley Road, and the road was blocked for many months.

The Probascos of course got a soil analysis before going ahead with their plans. But don't you suppose the man who built above Carmel Valley Road got a soil analysis too and was told not to worry about slippage?

In the future, if applicants want to build on a hill with a grade higher than, say, 30 degrees, I suggest that the planning commission require them to submit not only a soil analysis but a Slope Stability Study that projects what could happen as a result of (1) a season of unusually heavy rainfall, (2) an earthquake, and (3) when both of those things take place at the same time, a confluence of events by no means impossible in our area.

People who build on lots where such risks exist stand to lose the most if a catastrophe happens. And the only ones to benefit will be the lawyers, when suits are filed.

Natural balance

Dear Editor:

Please support the natural order in this special land where we live. It is a unique place of natural beauty and also the home of a diverse range of wild creatures.

Our way of life often clashes with these native creatures. Our means of commerce and transportation leave many animals orphaned or injured. The SPCA of Monterey County Wildlife Rescue Center is a means of nursing them to health and maturity so they can return to their natural place of living.

We need your help to help these animals. You may say what does it matter if a scrub jay passes away or even a raccoon or two. I say to you, the scrub jay and the raccoons, "You are a child of the universe no less than the trees and the stars; you have a right to be there." (From Desiderata, No. 10).

We invite you to visit the Wildlife Rescue Center to see what goes on here. It is operated with donations, two employees and volunteer workers. Needed are a sturdy washing machine, $20,000 for a sewer project and of course, volunteers.

When you give your time as a volunteer or your donation to support the center, you are helping the natural balance where we all live together: you, me, the scrub jay and raccoons.

Canyon camouflage

Dear Editor:

Webster's definition of the word euphemism: "the substitution of an agreeable or inoffensive expression for one that may offend or suggest something unpleasant."

Example: The use, by a certain group, of the name "Citizens for Hatton Canyon" instead of a true name such as "Citizens to Desecrate Hatton Canyon" or "Citizens for a Hatton Canyon Freeway."

Not only is their planning concept flawed but now they have resorted to devious means to camouflage their image before the public.

Council hammers out balanced biennial budget

By FRANK GEORGE

THE CARMEL City Council appropriated $15,000 for the Carmel Business Association and passed resolutions establishing the "Carmel Tommorrow Committee" and a renter's committee at the biennial budget meeting Sept. 15.

Dressed informally in shirtsleeves and polo shirts, Mayor Jean Grace and four councilmembers spent close to five hours hammering out a balanced budget. Final adoption is set for the Oct. 2 city council meeting.

By deleting items such as a large mile-per-hour display board, the council had enough left over to be able to give $2,837 to the Forest and Beach Commission's summer help fund.

"We had talked earlier about the possibility of adding a new staff position to the forestry department," said Councilman Jim Wright. "But it really wasn't in the draft budget. I think the council was sympathetic to that with this gesture."

The new renter's committee will have 10 members, with each councilmember appointing two people to the committee.

"The General Plan identifies one of our 'issues of local significance' to be 'encouraging land uses which provide goods and services to local residents,' " explained City Administrator Doug Schmitz in the report on the 1990-92 finances. He said one of the most common reasons for closure of resident-serving businesses is the inability of the owner to pay the high rents.

"In an effort to develop incentives and ways to encourage resident-serving businesses, it is proposed that the council (form) a committee of landlords, tenants, real estate and banking professionals to develop a report on how the city might implement the aforementioned policies of the General Plan," Schmitz said.

The Carmel Tommorrow Committee should come up with solutions for problems related to traffic and the business district, among others. It was suggested the group could focus on a way to close the business district to cars, by busing people in from a parking lot off Highway 1.

"We had a fair on Ocean Avenue once and we closed it down for a whole day," said Councilman Bob Fischer. "It was wonderful, you could walk right down the middle of the street."

In arguments for the CBA funds, Kathie Ritter of the Carmel Business Association said, "We are using old typewriters and we have an antiquated phone system." She said if Carmel expects to remain economically happy, the city needs to put more money into nurturing its visitors.

The council approved the appropriation 3-2, with Grace and Wright in the minority.

"If the city and the city council were interested in marketing Carmel, I think we would go to some sort of a professional," Wright said.

He said other commissions must give detailed explanations of their needs and expenses when applying for a grant, and the council was not treating the CBA appropriation as a grant.

"If it's not grant, it's a contractual arrangement," he explained.

In other moves, the council set aside $20,240 for the Community and Cultural Commission and $2,000 for Planned Parenthood of Monterey County. Schmitz said the cultural commission money could be consolidated for programming and the annual "Festival of Firsts" playwriting competition. The Planned Parenthood funds will go strictly toward education in Carmel schools.

The Monterey Bay Symphony was also a winner, as was the Harrison Memorial Library. The musicians received $2,000 to help pay for their four concerts. The library was rewarded an extra 13 working hours for their part-time archivist, increasing her hours to 30 hours a week.

But the Hatton Canyon Coalition and the Monterey County Film Commission were losers.

The coalition was denied $10,000 for support to technical studies relating to alternatives to the proposed roadway through the canyon, and the film commission's request for $500 was denied.

The recreation department was also technically in the loser's column, as the council unanimously approved a motion making the department's secretary continue being a part-time one rather than a full-time one.

'If the city and the city council were interested in marketing Carmel, I think we would go to some sort of a professional.'
— James Wright

In eliminating the deficit column, the council decided to ax $7,400 from street-coating funds and $400 from the printing bill for the Planning Commission's design guideline booklet for residents. The nixing of the mile-per-hour display board, which shows drivers what the speed limit is and displays their actual speeds, hewed $7,000 from the draft budget.

Supes wait for environmental study on Carmel Point plan

By DAVID LELAND

COUNTY SUPERVISORS Tuesday delayed a decision on the Stewart property in Carmel Point for at least three weeks, while county public works officials prepare a report on potential cumulative environmental impacts.

Carmel Point resident Charles Chrietzberg had appealed to the board a Monterey County Planning Commission decision allowing Morgan Gilman to construct a single-family home on the 39,000-square-foot site.

"The rational, sane approach is to take these issues and study them," said Michael Albov, an attorney representing Chrietzberg, referring to potential impacts such as traffic, drainage and erosion.

The now-vacant lot, bordered by Scenic Road and Ocean View and Isabell avenues, formerly housed one large home on four of the original lots.

Bay Area-based Scenic Associates, seven partners who plan to develop the property, plan to build a total of eight homes on the land.

Albov insisted that Chrietzberg and other Carmel Point residents opposing the planning commission decision had no qualms with Gilman's plans for a 1,688-square-foot-home, which stands about 16.5 feet tall, far below the 18-foot height limit imposed on the point. The design has received approval from the Carmel Point Advisory Committee.

"We are asking that before that home, as pretty as it is, be built, that you look at the cumulative impacts," Albov said.

Instead, Albov said the county should require an environmental impact report for the property that would examine cumulative problems of building eight homes on the land.

But Anthony Lombardo, an attorney representing Gilman, told the board that state environmental land-use law does not support an applicant applying for a single-family dwelling to conduct and EIR, unless officials are positive there will be adverse impacts.

"If we get down to preparing EIRs for every 1,600-square-foot dwelling, we might as well not do negative declarations anymore," said Lombardo, referring to the status usually given smaller projects after environmental concerns are addressed and mitigated.

Lombardo also cited the recent case of a commercial service center in Carmel Valley, where the 6th District Court of Appeals found that "opinions" or worries over environmental concerns do not merit the preparation of an EIR.

But 5th District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman shot back that Lombardo was "stretching our patience" in comparing a commercial enterprise with construction of a private home.

She also added that the edicts contained in the Carmel Valley Master Plan were essential to that case, where only county regulations apply in Carmel Point.

While she agreed that some study should be done on the land before building begins, Strasser Kauffman stopped short of demanding an EIR.

"It's a very sensitive, valuable parcel...there is intense local activity," said Strasser Kauffman, referring to previous efforts by Carmel Point residents to limit height and protect design standards. "If there was ever a property that needed to be looked at as a whole, this is it."

After questioning representatives from Monterey County Flood Control District and Public Works Department, the board unanimously decided to continue the matter to 11:15 a.m. Tuesday, Oct. 9, in the supervisors chambers.

"We have to go some extra steps so we can stand behind what is ultimately constructed on that parcel," Strasser Kauffman said.

After receiving the environmental report, supervisors can either ask for an EIR or overturn the appeal.

IN OTHER action this week, supervisors:

— Set public hearing for 2:50 p.m. Tuesday, October 23, to receive comments on a countywide "Water Capital Facilities Plan."

The ambitious study attempts to find a countywide solution to the area's water problems by proposing various water-saving projects and methods of funding.

First District Supervisor Marc Del Piero said he welcomes the county becoming more involved in solving the water crisis.

"It is very difficult to render a decision on land use without information on water," he said, adding that often the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District and Californial-American Water Co. officials are often at odds on the amount of water available for a project. "One of the problems we have had in the past is getting definitive information."

But Strasser Kauffman questioned how effective a joint venture between the peninsula and Salinas Valley could be, with the majority of county water being used outside of the peninsula for agricultural uses.

After the meeting she said that the peninsula uses only about 10 percent of the area's water, and that it was not fair that area residents should have to foot anymore than 10 percent of the bill for capital improvements.

According to the report by Boyle Engineering Corp., residential water bills will nearly double between 1995 and 2000 if $415 million in eight water projects move forward by the turn of the century.

Annual operation and maintainence costs for the eight water projects will run about $9 million in 1995 and $43 million by the year 2010.

The residential customer using one-third acre foot of water will pay $139 annually in 1995 and $265 in the year 2000.

— Set a public hearing for 2:45 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 25, to consider lifting restrictions placed on the golf course at Spanish Bay forbidding major events.

Brought to the board by 4th District Supervisor Sam Karas, the hearing is in response to requests from Pebble Beach Co. officials to hold a portion of the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am Golf Tournament at Spanish Bay next year.

Earlier this month, the PGA ruled that Cypress Point Club could no longer be used for the tournament because of its discriminatory membership policies.

Environmentalists, such as the local chapter of the Sierra Club and League of Women Voters oppose allowing play at Spanish Bay because of its sensitive dune habitiat.

Strasser Kauffman, who opposed having a public hearing told The Pine Cone that the board has no business in hearing the appeal for play at Spanish Bay.

The problem, she said, is a civil rights issue concerning Cypress Point.

She added that the board should not consider overturning a ruling it made only last December prohibiting large-scale tournaments at Spanish Bay.

At that time the Pebble Beach Co. was cited for destroying precious dune habitat to exapnd its golf course. The board demanded restoration, which is still underway.

— Voted 4-1 (with Strasser Kauffman dissenting), to allow the Chateau Julien Winery to keep its five wine processing tanks without securing a county permit.

"The law is the law," said Strasser Kauffman after the hearing.

Some neighbors began complaining about a year ago that the 20-foot high tanks were an eyesore, and demanded they be removed.

But winery officials said they were necessary to the operation and actually cut down noise and traffic by allowing them to produce the wine on-site.

Strasser Kauffman argued that any type of building in Carmel Valley needs a permit, why should Chateau Julien be exempt?

But 2nd District Supervisor Barbara Shipnuck told the board that the property has always been an agricultural use and, therefore, is exempt from the permit process.

The board did, however, agree that the tanks should go through the county's design review process, which could mean they would be painted green to blend in with the hills of Carmel Valley.

Heron collection has found a home

By FRANK GEORGE

OPPORTUNITY IS often elusive as love, but occasionally a chance to risk fortunes for an evasive prize comes at precisely the right moment.

Perhaps this was the case on Sept. 4 when the Carmel City Council appropriated $50,800 in city funds for the Herbert Heron memorabilia collection.

Personal letters to Heron from Jack London and colorful Forest Theater posters dating back to the 1920s highlight this unique assemblage of photographs, postcards, inscribed first editions and ancient theater props.

"Dear Bert: The fiend! He's broken away from me," wrote London in a 1903 letter to Heron. "What of the Bernard Shaw indiscretion, and he's now beating me at chess right along. Why in hell didn't you warn me sooner? — Jack London."

The message has "Jack London, 1216 Telegraph Ave. Oakland, Cal.," stamped at the top.

Margaret Pelikan, Harrison Memorial Library director, said the value of the collection lies in its historical significance to the people of Carmel.

"That material has been sitting there all these years," she said. She added the artifacts were held in a storehouse at Heron's home near the Forest Theater for decades.

"When someone writes a book about Jack London, primary sources are consulted," Pelikan explained. "These materials have never been incorporated in a book."

She said the library staff may make new discoveries about the life and times of Carmel's

Water board discusses alternate water sources

By FRANK GEORGE

THE MONTEREY Peninsula Water Management District Board considered advice from district staff on a desalination plant that has a $15 million price tag on Monday night.

The interim water source could also involve a 30-percent water bill increase, according to Director Dale Hekhuis.

Hekhuis said the board only directed the staff to do a feasibility study for the plant itself.

"This could mean a 25- to 30-percent increase in water bills," he said. "How will the community view that?"

The director said the board will not know exactly how much the plant would cost until the study is done, adding, "We'll have to go for a bond issue to finance this thing."

An alternative water supply is necessary until the drought ends or until a large dam is built on the Carmel River. Another source considered by the board is a large well near Fort Ord in Seaside.

"The staff did a geohydrologic study and one well looked promising," Hekhuis said. "This well could produce 1,200 acre feet of water per year."

In other action, the board approved a Carmel River lagoon vegetation and wildlife program.

"Because the cost is relatively modest, there wasn't any concern about lagoon enhancement," said Hekhuis. The Carmel River lagoon is located at the mouth of the river at the beach on the southern end of Scenic Drive.

The program's capital cost will be $25,000, and annual operating expenses will total $2,000. A mapping study will be done once every five years once the program is implemented, and the price tags for these are $25,000 each. The program will not result in an increase in consumer water bills.

In other business, the board discussed the transportation, tracking and holding of steelhead trout on the river. The fish are currently existing in isolated pools on the dry river bed and in a pond at Quail Lodge. If the drought continues, the local steelhead gene pool may be threatened.

District General Manager Jim Cofer provided the board with information on fishery mitigation, which was met with little enthusiasm by the directors.

"I can't support operating expenses for a trapping facility we won't need when we build a dam," said Director Jim Hughes. "I think we're being looked at as the deep pocket by some state and federal agencies (meaning the Department of Fish and Game, the Fish and Wildlife Service and The National Marine Fisheries)."

Hekhuis said the board is unsure if maintaining the local steelhead strain is actually the district's responsibility.

"One thing we indicated to staff was that they should get the Department of Fish and Game's view of these programs," he said."

Although the water board could not support funding for fish ladders, they agreed in unison that the district needs to maintain river bank year (an acre foot is one acre of water one foot deep.)" He added the well could be pumping water for peninsula homes as early as next year.

Also on the agenda, the board asked the staff to table a toilet retrofit rebate ordinance until the desalination plant study is completed. The ordinance would have provided district funds for $100 rebates to residents who installed ultra low-flow toilets.

vegetation. The death of plants and trees along rivers during drought years often creates the danger of erosion and subsequent flooding during wet years.

'The staff did a geohydrologic study and one well looked promising. This well could produce 1,200 acre feet of water per year.'

— Dale Hekhuis

"There was pretty broad agreement for the protection of trees and vegetation along the river bank," Hekhuis said. "A lot of this has already been done. There is already drip-irrigation up and down the river bank."

But Hekhuis said the board couldn't decide how much irrigation and restoration the board should do on land away from the river bank.

Water board to discuss adoption of peninsula water allocation

By FRANK GEORGE

NEW WATER connections may be out of the question if the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District Board adopts a low water allocation for the peninsula.

"If they adopt the 16,700 acre feet annual allocation alternative, we show that we've pretty much used up that water supply," said District General Manager Jim Cofer (an acre foot equals one acre of water one foot deep).

The board will meet at 7 p.m. on Monday, Sept. 24 at the Monterey City Council Chambers on Pacific Street in Monterey. There, they may select one of five allowances, ranging from 16,700 acre feet annually to 20,500 acre feet annually.

Also at the meeting, the directors may certify the Environmental Impact Report (EIR) for the water supply and adopt a mitigation program for the amount selected.

Cofer said the 16,700-acre-foot plan would mean all the peninsula tap water is committed until a new well in Seaside starts pumping in the latter part of 1991. But an allocation could not be adopted until the Oct. 22 water board meeting at the earliest.

"I'm hoping we'll get the allocation EIR certified at least by the November meeting," he said. "A first draft (of the proposed findings) is our objective on Monday."

He added that he hopes the board will direct the district staff to come back with formal findings for the October meeting.

"We'll review legal actions the board has to take in adopting a water supply program," he said.

In other business, the directors will probably reject the immediate implementation of a low-flow toilet rebate program, according to Director Dale Hekhuis.

"I think that's been pre-empted," he said, refering to the decision to shelve the program, which was made by the board at their Sept. 17 special meeting.

At the special meeting, the directors had nixed the idea of granting $100 rebates to residents who install ultra low-flow toilets in their homes. They decided instead to direct funds toward the study of a desalination plant in either Moss Landing, Monterey, Pacific Grove or the Marina area.

The desalination plant and the retrofit program are both potential temporary water sources that may be needed until a new dam is built or until the drought ends.

Strong support for bay sanctuary in addition to preventing future oil drilling in the region, including the San Mateo County coast which is an area proposed for offshore drilling.

"There is an abundance of ecological, historical, educational and environmental resources that cannot be replaced," said Mello.

He also said that the area contains numerous archeological resources, valuable commercial and recreational fishing, a unique submarine canyon and nine research and educational facilities. "All of these assets combine to make the central coast a prime tourist location."

Fifth District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman, representing the Association of Monterey Bay Area Governments (AMBAG), testified to the importance of protecting the sea otter refuge south of Big Sur.

"We have a magnificant coastline, and I urge inclusion of the entirety of the Big Sur Coast. Give our local residents and our 4 million visitors peace of mind by providing protection for this area," said Strasser Kauffman.

Pacific Grove resident Jo Stallard, who is also a member of the county planning commission, was applauded for her willingness to drop her proposed boundary, which extended from Alaska to Mexico and out to Hawaii, in exchange for the 3,800 square miles of protection.

She thanked the panel for their correspondence, which said that her proposal was "beyond the scope of reasonable analysis." Stallard said it was a better response than, "what an asinine idea."

Concerns about the draft EIS included omission of regulations on commercial vessels, sewage dumping, low-flying airplanes, commercial shipping and toxic discharges, and "thrill crafts" such as jet-skis.

Sam Farr, state assemblyman from the 25th District, said that jet-skis must be banned. One otter has already been killed, and the potential for other accidents with the new recreational craft is evident.

Preferring the largest boundary possible for the Monterey Bay Sanctuary, Farr said, "We want the whole enchilada."

In reference to children's paintings of the bay that were on display at the hearing, Farr said that when the next generation paints the bay, "We do not want to see an oil dredge in the background."

Carmel City Councilman Bob Fischer said that he was gratified to see the magnitude of public interest that has taken hold in the past two years for the protection of the Monterey Bay.

The overall theme from peninsula organizations such as the Moss Landing Marine Laboratories, Hopkins Marine Station, Monterey Bay Aquarium, Save Our Shores, Friends of the Sea Otter, and others, seemed to be the this was a "great time," comparable to the first part of the century when the national park system was established, and also the last opportunity to protect the gift of nature.

Concerns expressed at the hearing about adequate funding for the staff and management of the "holistic and integrated' estuarine and sanctuary program indicated that Washington had not offered enough money to hire qualified personnel for the huge task at hand.

Rachel Saunders, speaking for the Center for Marine Conservation, asked everyone to alert the Bush administration about additional funding. She requested that NOAA take a closer look at the proposed sanctuary's financial needs and, "back it with bucks."

Toward the close of the hearing, a former student body president of Carmel High School, Chris Hartzell, suggested to the Washington panel that perhaps they might consider a reversal of priority as to who speaks first at their next hearing.

Rather than having politicians and other officials start the hearing, Hartzell recommended that the "people speak first, so that the officials could be here to listen to what we have to say."

He said that there is only one chance to save the earth, and that is now. The problems now are not the same as the problems of the past.

"People could get away to other countries where there was no pollution, not so now. Now is the time to take care of the earth. We can't compromise future generations," said Hartzell.

Murder-suicide

WHILE THIS week's murder marks only the fifth in the history of Carmel and the first in a decade, it is the fourth to have originated from domestic disputes.

The first murder in Carmel occurred in 1914, two years before incorporation and the establishment of a police department.

Details are sketchy concerning murderer Kodoni, a Japanese artist.

'He didn't say a word. He just jumped out with a shotgun and started blasting away.'

— Det. Sgt. Pete Poitras
— Carmel Police

According to a letter written by Kodoni in 1915 and published in the Pine Cone, he killed his girlfriend, Helena Wood Smith. Kodoni was sentenced to life in Folsom Prison; he died in 1946 while on parole.

In 1953, Denny Cortez was charged with the fatal shooting of Leslie Wilson in her Carmel home. Despite pleading self-defense, Cortez was convicted of second-degree murder.

According to newspaper reports, Cortez was Wilson's business partner and roommate. When Wilson returned home with Monterey businessman, Charles Teague, Cortez got out of bed with a gun in his hand.

Teague attempted to wrestle the gun away, but Cortez broke free and shot Wilson.

In 1980 a man was bludgeoned to death at Carmel Beach. Police suspect that the killing was the result of a homosexual love affair gone sour.

The only other killing in Carmel occurred when a driver was charged with negligent homicide when he struck down a pedestrian in 1944. He was tried by military authorities.

Last summer's murder of Linda Perkins at her Mission Fields home took place outside city limits. That murder, being investigated by the Monterey County Sheriff's Department, still remains unsolved.

Planners grant use permit for Probasco house plan

By FRANK GEORGE

DESPITE PROTESTS from neighbors and fears of future landslides, the Carmel Planning Commission granted developer William Probasco a use permit for his lot on the south side of 11th Avenue at Torres Street.

"By law, we had to let him build," said Commissioner Philip Coniglio. "The city should have had the foresight when they subdivided that property."

The lot was created by a subdivision in 1976 and a subsequent lot line adjustment in 1985.

"This is a beautifully designed house on what I consider an unworkable lot," said Jane Mayer of the Carmel Residents Association. "This house will be built on over a 50-percent slope. I think there should be more than mild concern about this."

Mayer continued her protest, saying, "The 30-percent grade rule has been in effect for quite some time."

"We don't prohibit building on slopes in excess off 30 percent," Commissioner Brian Congleton corrected her. "The ordinance does not prohibit construction on this site."

Be that as it may, others took issue with Probasco's plans.

"When you put a heavy house like that on a hill of clay, the soil becomes impregnated with water during heavy rain seasons," said Carmel resident Dorothy Nye. "You can have a catastrophe like when the house overlooking Carmel Valley Road fell down in 1983 and blocked the road for months. When something like that happens, the lawyers have a feeding frenzy."

The commission OK'd the development of the site by a 6-1 vote, with Commissioner Barbara Lysle in the minority and Commissioner Lindsay Hanna stepping down due to a conflict of interest.

Probasco had obtained approval for building on an adjoining lot at the July 25 planning commission meeting.

"There's too much going on with all the trees coming out," Lysle said at the meeting Sept. 12. "I just think it's a lovely piece of property with a house that's far too large."

Probasco first brought his case to the planning commission earlier this year. The commission continued the case several times, directing Probasco and his architect Al Saroyan to reduce the mass of the two structures and to make them blend with the environment.

"We have come up with a final plan that is better in terms of mass," Probasco said. "We just can't make it any smaller and keep it a three-bedroom house."

In other action, at the five-and-a-half-hour meeting, the commission unanimously approved the city's design guideline booklet for residential homes.

"We decided we're going to give it a trial run," said Coniglio. "We just decided to put it into use and review it periodically and see if any changes need to be made."

Only one person (former planning commissioner Howard Nieman), spoke during the public hearing for the resolution. Nieman critiqued various portions of the precedent-setting booklet.

Also on the agenda, the commission unanimously approved a design review for a house on San Antonio Street that was once occupied by writer Lincoln Steffens. The commission denied a variance application for the same property 6-1, with Commissioner John Kennedy the lone dissenter.

The design review decision allowed owner William Tabor to add a garage to the house on San Antonio Street and change the building's outward appearance.

The commission had rejected a Carmel Architectural Preservation Committee's request to deny the variance to the house's outside appearance and keep it close to its original form.

The commission said the request had no merit, as Tabor had been told by the city that there were no historical ordinances prohibiting him from doing whatever he wanted with the house.

But due to the denial of the variance application, Taber must put the garage on the south side rather than the north. A large Monterey pine would have had to be removed if he had proceeded with his original plans.

"I think this is the first time people have taken an old house and beautified it rather than tearing it down and building a bigger new one," said Commissioner Hanna.

Asked about the lengthiness of the meeting and the heavy agenda, Congleton said, "It's hard to make valid decisions when they're that long. We were going to discuss the fact that the agendas have been so lengthy, but the meeting ran over too long."

Birth mothers group meets every month

A BIRTH mothers support group meets once a month at the Childrens Services Center in Monterey.

Birth mothers are women who have given their children up for adoption; the group allows these women to share their feelings with others, according to Teri Livingston, who has been a member of the 2-year-old group.

"There are a lot of women out there...and there's a lot of pain involved," she said. "This gives them a chance to talk about it. We're not a search group, but we have information on it."

The support group meets at 7 p.m. on the last Wednesday of each month at the center at 648 Pine Ave. in Pacific Grove. More information can be obtained by calling either Carol Bishop or Gayle Ward at Childrens Services Center of Monterey County, 649-3033.

He helps youths get a taste for the Great Outdoors

By SUSAN BECK

MIKE MILLIGAN will never refuse a boy who wants a taste of the Great Outdoors.

Having a great time in the outdoors might just be what it takes to get a child interested in being a Boy Scout, said Milligan, scout master for the Carmel Valley club.

Jason Thomas was in Carmel Valley visiting for the summer. He wanted to go camping, so Milligan said he'd take him. At the end of a day-hike Jason reached the top of a mountain. He was exhausted, but felt a sense of accomplishment: "This sure beats sitting on a couch watching TV. Jason ended up joining the scouts.

'If we can help a child develop responsibility or get parents to use scouting as an avenue to get involved with youth, then we will have a better community.'

— Mike Milligan

Milligan has been the club's leader for the past 18 months. When he took the position there were two scouts. Now there are 33, and still growing.

Milligan moved here from Los Angeles 15 years ago where he was an operations manager for a department store. He came to Carmel Valley specifically as a partner for the former Buckeye Restaurant, and he's called it home ever since.

He married in 1976 on Valentine's Day, and now has three children, Marlo, 11, Meredith, 6, and Brandon, 13, who, perhaps naturally, is a Boy Scout.

Now a sales manager for SCR Retail Systems, Milligan said his strength lies in organization. That's probably why he was chosen to lead the valley scouts. He was a president twice for the Carmel Mission Kiwanis chapter, and lieutenant governor for the Monterey County Kiwanis.

As president of the Tularcitos School Parent Club he started a new Cub Scouts pack. Milligan knew most of the parents and how the school worked.

At a school open house 26 boys expressed an interest in Cub Scouts, and in three years there were 77 boys involved in the pack, said Milligan. "It was a natural transition to move on to the Boy Scouts."

Scouting started in England by Baden Powell in 1908. By 1910, the Boy Scouts became part of the American way of life. The international program is sponsored by several organizations such as individual churches, Kiwanis, and Elks.

The concept of scouting is to help young men realize their full potential in life. Through activities and achievements within the program, Boy Scouts learn how to get along with their peers and gain values that will be used throughout their lives.

"If we can help a child develop responsibility or get parents to use scouting as an avenue to get involved with youth, then we will have a better community," said Milligan.

He is particularly proud of the two young men that were in the pack when he started. Tony Hill, 18, and Chris Cornelissen, 16, both recently received Eagle Scout honors, the highest in scouting. Only 1 percent of all Boy Scouts in the United States achieve Eagle Scout status.

"Tony and Chris showed enough resourcefulness and tenacity to finish their Eagle project. It's a tremendous accomplishment that takes thousands of hours," said Milligan.

Recognizing his "black-and-white nature," Milligan tries to attract people to add color, flair, and pizazz to get involved with the pack. "I only ask for short-range commitments, but I expect 100 percent. It works."

Getting everyone to give their best is not that difficult because the people who participate really like what they are doing, said Milligan, who as scout master puts in about 70 hours a month.

The Boy Scouts in Carmel Valley are sponsored by the Carmel Valley and Carmel Mission Kiwanis.

"The Carmel Valley Kiwanis is so supportive. Our program could not have happened without their financial and manpower assistance. Without those men, I couldn't have done it," said Milligan.

A large portion of funds come from activities such as selling programs at Laguna Seca races, working the Big Sur Marathon, and selling Christmas wreaths.

To assist with summer camp fees, activities, and equipment, 40 percent of the funds are applied to the boys' account. Last year, 30 percent of the scouts paid for summer camp by themselves, said Milligan.

Boys from 7 to 10 years old can join the Cub Scouts. Boy Scouts start at 10 and a half to 18 years old. Carmel Valley's Troop 127 has six boys from Carmel and Monterey, said Milligan, "Any boy on the peninsula can join."

His troop follows the scout program, but does things slightly different. They camp every month, and encourage parents to go along, said Milligan.

"I'll take any parent, grown adult without children, or retired person with us. I can recruit boys all day, but it's the adults that make it work," said Milligan.

There is a direct benefit for the youth, said the scout master. "I love it. You have to experience it. The best part of scouting is training a child to go camping, be outdoors, and top it off with a 50-mile, 30-to-40-pound backpacking trip. It's absolutely wonderful," said Milligan.

Bank on it

FIRST NATIONAL Bank of Monterey County has announced plans to establish a banking office at the mouth of the valley.

The 3,300-square-foot office is to be located at the current site of Stanley Appliance Co., in the Carmel Rancho Center.

The branch office will offer a full complement of commercial services, including merchant banking, deposit and loan products and safety deposit boxes.

"This new location will give First National the opportunity to more effectively serve the financial needs of the residents and businesses of Carmel/Carmel Valley," said Clayton C. Larson, executive vice president of First National Bank. "We have developed a widespread customer base in this market area and this new branch is our commitment to provide even better personalized service to our customers in Carmel and Carmel Valley."

The proposed banking office will undergo a complete internal renovation to enhance the comfort of the customer and efficiency of service, according to bank officals.

An opening date is anticipated for mid-1991.

Stanley Appliance Co., which has been in business since 1959, will relocate to 556 Carmel Rancho Center, formerly occupied by Cate Electrical Co.

First National Bank, held by Pacific Capital Bancorp, has more than 1,100 local shareholders and has a combined total assets in excess of $187 million.

CBA news...The City of Carmel anteed up $15,000 for the CBA at its annual budget meeting Sept. 15, a raise of $5,000 from last year's allocation.

"This strikes me as being quite positive," said Kathie Ritter, CBA president. "We've managed to open the door to working cooperatively (with the city)."

Ritter said it is unclear whether the city wants the CBA to use the money for promotion or visitor services, but that will be rectified in short time.

She added that next year, economic development and social programs will submit grant proposals to the Carmel City Council before budget hearings.

While the CBA had requested "slightly more than $20,000," Ritter said she was happy to see that the city is realizing that the business district plays an integral part in funding the city.

"This is the first time they've (council) said that economic development is a function that the city should be involved in," Ritter said.

In an seemingly unrelated matter, Carmel Pine Cone Publisher Bill Brown has been named to the CBA Board of Directors.

Brown takes over the spot vacated by Dean Vittetoe, whose import/export business is causing him to travel extensively, making board meetings increasingly difficult.

New faces...Matrix Design Group, an architectural, interior design and planning firm with offices in Carmel and Palo Alto, have announced that Virginia Loh and Bruce Chartove have joined the firm.

In addition, Kay B. Lee has joined the firm in charge of its administrative group.

SBA news...The SBA is soliciting nominations for Small Business of the Year awards to select one small business that best exemplifies the country's small businesses.

While trade associations, chambers of commerce and business organizations frequently sponsor candidates, business owners can nominate their own business.

Nominations need to be received by Nov. 2. For further information contact Melende Ward at (209) 487-5791.

EIRs and stuff...AMBAG, the local chapter of the Sierra Club and the county air pollution control district are co-sponsoring "Environmental Review for the Lay Person" from 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 22, at the Seacliff Inn in Aptos.

The primary focus of the workshop is for the lay person who needs an introduction to EIRs and other state and federal environmental policies.

There is a $10 registration fee. Lunch and information material are available for additional fees. For more information call Darlene O'Connor at 373-6116.

Parties of note...The Monterey County Hospitality Association will throw a wingding from 5 to 7 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 26, at Memory Garden at Custom House Plaza in Monterey. Phone 649-6544 for further information.

Also, the Monterey County chapter of the California Restaurant Association will celebrate the year with a bash Sunday, Sept. 30.

A champagne reception takes place from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., with dinner and dancing following at the Monterey Sheraton Hotel.

The price is $55 per person. Reservations need to be made by Sept. 25. Call 625-4373.

Designer kudos...Linda Williams, owner of Linda Williams – By Design in Carmel, had been named to "Who's Who in Interior Design" and "Who's Who in America – In The West" in the 1990 editions.

Williams was cited for her ability to determine her clients' needs and lifestyles and then create the best personal environment for them; fine-tuned to their way of life.

"Comfort is a priority for most of my clients," says Williams. "I take great pride in drawing up floor plans, selecting the ideal furniture, creating color schemes and looking for special treasures that truly personalize a home."

Prior to moving to Carmel in 1987, Williams operated an interior design company in Houston, Texas for 10 years.

She is on the board of Carmel's Forest Theater and a member of the Soroptimists International of Carmel Bay.

Valley youth center saddles up for last summer fling

By SUSAN BECK

"STRICTLY COUNTRY" is the theme of a "last summer fling" for the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center and everyone who attends should be prepared to dance and whoop it up.

Kathleen Tarp, director of the youth center, said the last Music in the Park event will be held Saturday, Sept. 22, from noon to 5 p.m. at the center's park on Ford Road in Carmel Valley.

The free "fling" was coordinated by Tarp and co-chairperson Remy Ryan, who is also a member of the community center's board of directors.

The idea came about by default. The day was intended to be the center's fifth annual chili cook-off. But entries were limited, said Tarp, because of rules and regulations set down by the International Chili Society.

Members of the society travel all over the country competing in chili cook-offs, however, they are not allowed to enter cook-offs that do not recognize the society's sanctions, said Tarp, adding, "Our chili cook-off is just a backyard group who want to root and toot."

Ryan, a speech therapist for the Carmel Unified School District, said that the "country" day in the park will probably be successful despite competition from the Monterey Jazz Festival.

"It's a good cause for kids. Everyone gets out and does as much as they can to make it work. All the other summer events have done very well, so this one should too," said Ryan.

Rene Hoag, a valley resident and owner of Rene's Nails and Beauty Boutique in the village, told Tarp not to worry about chili. Hoag's family will be up from Los Angeles to provide chili for the day as a donation.

Her family's team, which competes regularly in chili cook-offs, is dubbed the "Dirty, Rotten, Mean, and Nasty Team." They were disappointed in the change of events, but decided to bring their chili anyway, said Tarp.

Hoag will head up the team, and also plans to cook cornbread to go along with the family's chili. There will also be chili dogs, chili burgers, regular burgers with the works, and beverages for sale throughout the afternoon.

All proceeds from the event go back into the youth center's coffers, said Tarp.

The "legendary" Carmel Valley band, Strictly Country, will starting playing at noon, said Tarp. William Faulkner's Mariachi Mixtlan will play from 3 to 4 p.m., and there will be a Wild West Show performed by the "Desperados" from Santa Cruz.

Western Dancers from the Western Ballroom Association in San Luis Obispo will perform and teach the audience dances such as the Cotton-Eyed Joe and the Texas two-step, and Smokey the Bear will be around to join in on the dancing lessons, too, said Tarp.

Some quiet time will be provided by Carmel attorney Ray Kraft, who doubles as a "cowboy poet." More active children's games will include tug-of-war, sack races, and relays.

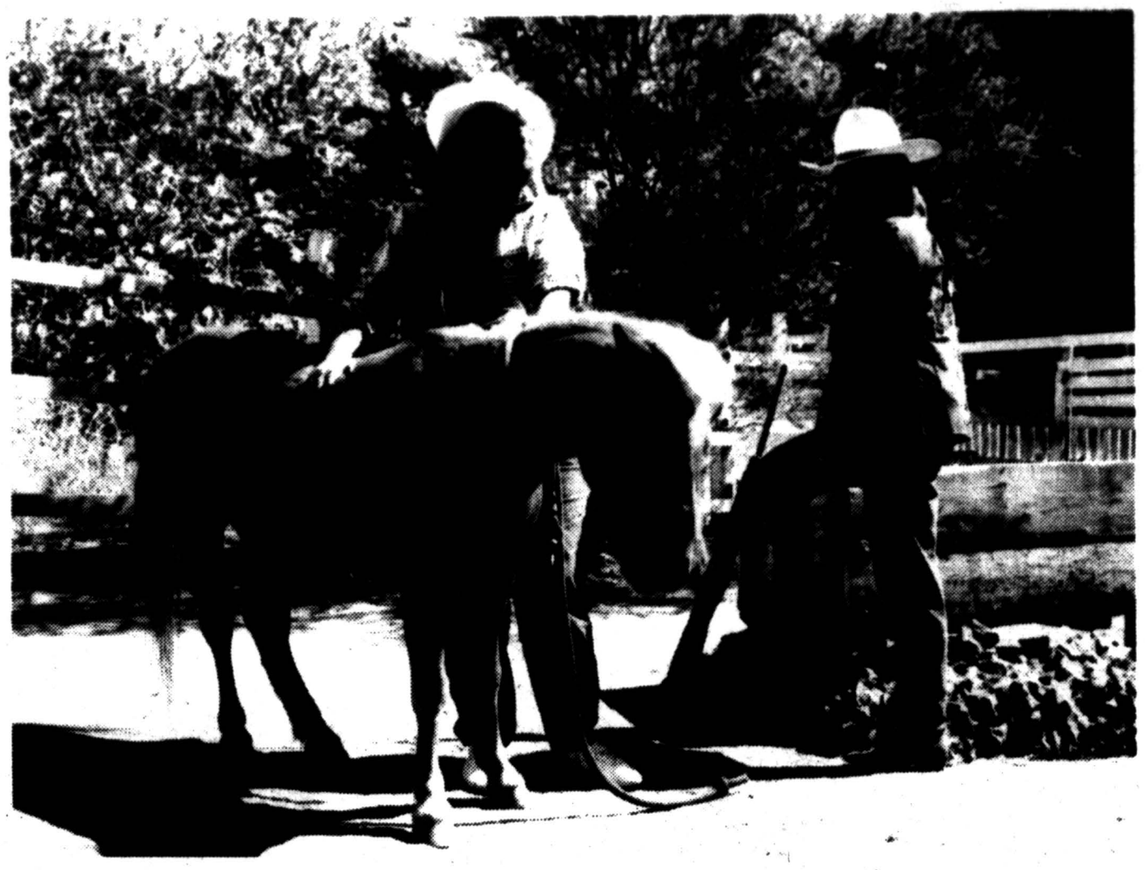
The last summer fling, however, does not mean that the fun is over in the valley, said Tarp. The youth center's director plans a lecture series coordinated with Monterey Peninsula College called "Thirsty Thursdays" from 7 to 9 p.m.

'It's a good cause for kids. Everyone gets out and does as much as they can to make it work. All the other summer events have done very well, so this one should too.'

— Remy Ryan

"Come and quench your thirst for knowledge on topics such as Russia, Shakespeare, and the Middle East," said Tarp.

A private company from Carmel, Rising Star Gymnastics, will teach children from 3 years old to the fifth-grade on Saturday mornings from 9 a.m. to noon, and Weight Watchers already has a class going on Monday from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m.



KATHLEEN TARP, director of the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center (left), Remy Ryan, and Porric, a 12-year-old Shetland pony, get in the mood for the center's last summer fling "Strictly Country."

For a lot of fun, said Tarp, there is going to be a dance club for adults once a month on Friday nights.

"Strictly Country is our last summer event, so bring your rooting, tooting, cowboy duds, and come out and enjoy the fun in the sun," said Tarp.

CARMEL RIVER WATER NEWS

By Henrietta Stern

What's up with water use?

THE 1990 water year ends on Sept. 30, and it will go down in history as another dry one. Actually it's the third "critically dry" year in a row, which followed a dry 1987. In the 89 years of record, the present four-year drought is unprecedented in terms of the combined duration and severity. As we celebrate "New Year's Eve" on Sept. 30, let's hope Water Year 1991 is a gusher!

For now, we must deal with the realities of drought. Our community has complied with mandatory 20 percent rationing since January 1989. We've done an excellent job too, and have even surpassed our goals. From January 1 through July 31, 1990 the community has saved more than 27 percent overall compared to the base year. Golf courses were the number one water saver of any group, with 36 percent savings over the first seven months of 1990.

ORDINANCES BALANCE COMMUNITY NEEDS

Due to the drought, ordinances have been passed to limit the number and type of new water permits, and to refine the rationing program. The board is also grappling with a special ordinance for golf courses, which are, as a group, the biggest commercial user of water. In all these situations, the water district board must balance the need to save water in a drought emergency, the need to protect the community from further drought vulnerability, and the need to foster a healthy economy so adequate employment opportunities exist for our citizens.

Anyone who has attended a Monterey Peninsula Water Management District Board meeting knows that these are not frivolous topics – emotions run high and opinions vary widely. Some question why any new permits are allowed in a drought, while other state that they rather sacrifice their lawn than their job. It takes the wisdom of Solomon to craft a solution that addresses various community needs, and still gets the job done in terms of saving water.

LIMITATION ON NEW CONNECTIONS

Today's column focuses on Ordinance No. 47, the ordinance that limits new water meter connections. Actually, the ordinance (passed in January 1990), limits the water that would be used by new construction or remodels to no more than 110 acre feet per year as long as the drought emergency exists. The ordinance also restricts certain types of uses, such as apartment complexes and commercial enterprises that would use more water than a single-family home. Some projects that entail significant community benefit (example: Monterey Swim-Gym), may be approved by the board, if a variance is granted at a public hearing.

WHAT'S ALL THIS BUILDING?

Various citizens have told district staff that they see a lot of commercial construction going on. How can this be if Ordinance No. 47 prohibits new commercial construction of any significant size? The answer has to do with timing. Many of the local projects that are presently under construction received their permits prior to December 1989. Anyone who has even done a small remodel on their home knows that it takes time to build things! For example, a new doctors's office across from my office has taken a year to build. Its water permit was likely granted in mid-1989, but no one (except some drought-tolerant plants) is using any water yet.

PROJECTS IN PROGRESS

Then there is the important category of building called "projects in progress." Ordinance No. 47 went into effect on Jan 22, 1990. However, any project that was "in the mill" and had achieved formal approvals from the city or county planning departments by Jan. 22 was allowed to apply for a water meter permit after that date. The board felt, and most citizens agree, that it would be unfair to suddenly halt a project that had already received city or county approvals at significant expense.

It turns out that there were more projects in progress than district staff anticipated. A result is that more permits (which represent more than 110 acre-feet of water), are legally being given out in 1990 under the provisions of Ordinance No. 47. The irony here is that the threat of a moratorium in December 1989 induced a stampede of water permit applications – much more than in a normal situation – because people feared they would never get a chance in the future. A five-week backlog of permits was piled high in the district office.

A PERMIT DOESN'T MEAN WATER USE NOW

An important fact to remember is that a water meter permit does not mean immediate water use. Many of the commercial "projects in progress" that receive permits this year won't actually start using water for another one and a half to two years. Again, it takes time to build significant-sized projects. By then, with Mother Nature's cooperation, we'll be back into a normal year, where there is more than adequate water. If it's still dry, it is highly likely that new wells in the Seaside groundwater basin (which is less dependent on annual rainfall than the Carmel River basin) will have been constructed.

NUMBERS CAN BE MISLEADING

Don't get too spooked when you hear about the number of permits being approved. A little over one third of the permits handed out in 1990 were for new construction. The vast majority are for remodels, which entail little or no new water. Some even use less water because of replacements of existing toilets with ultra-flow models.

Remember too, that the "projects in progress" phenomenon will occur only in 1990. If the drought and therefore Ordinance No. 47 continue into 1991 (I hope not!), there won't be any "leftovers" from city/county actions back in 1989. They all will have gotten their permits in 1990. Under Ordinance No. 47, water meter permits in 1991 will likely fall off significantly from 1990.

HAPPY NEW YEAR!

As we enter our new water year on Oct. 1, let's hope it's a happy one. We all know what that means – lots of rain to fill up our aquifers and enough flow to push the Carmel River into the sea! Get out your rain gear – we hope to be seeing some wet stuff by the end of November!

Singers needed for 'Porgy and Bess'

Next February, the Monterey Peninsula Choral Society will perform highlights from Scott Joplin's "Treemonisha" and George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess."

Local artists, MPCS singers, church and gospel singers will join together for this event. The works will be accompanied by an instrumental trio. Plans and announcements are being formulated now. Anyone interested in participating should call 375-0213 or 899-8494.

Two films from France presented

The Monterey Institute International Film Series will screen La Cage Aux Folles and This Man Must Die.

The greatest drag comedy since Some Like It Hot, La Cage Aux Folles will be shown Friday through Sunday, Sept. 21-23. Ugo Tognazzi and Michel Serrault co-star in this 1979 release that revolves around the hijinks of a pair of aging homosexuals who run a transvestite nightclub, La Cage Aux Folles. It will be shown in French with subtitles.

Claude Chabrol directed the Wednesday, Sept. 26 film offering, This Man Must Die. Rare screened, this is perhaps the best of all of Chabrol's crime films. The plot concerns the obsessive efforts of a father to track down the man who killed his young son in a hit and run accident. The 1970 film will be shown in French with subtitles.

Both films begin at 8:15 p.m. in the Morse Auditorium at the Monterey Institute of International Studies, 440 Van Buren St., Monterey. Admission is $4 general, $3 for students and senior citizens. For information, call 626-1730.

THIS & THAT

By Florence Mason

Mr. Bott's Dots

BOTTS' DOTS." The words elicit a smile, and a quick joke ("Wot's dot?"). But drivers on the bus and truck route into Carmel may have cause to thank Mr. Botts – wherever he may be – for his invention. The yellow, reflecting disks used to mark the center line are a first step in the city's plan to improve the dangerous curve at Santa Fe and Third. Other improvements will come as the result of an engineering study now underway.

There have been nine accidents at that curve in the last five years. I can't tell you why it has taken so long to do something about that. I can tell you that for me, it began five or six years ago when I was chairperson of Carmel's traffic committee and we came up with a plan for widening the curve.

There was only one problem: the change would require removal of one tree. Never mind that we planned to plant three new trees to replace that one; the city council of that time said no. Perhaps we (I) should not have accepted defeat so easily. It wasn't until my own accident last year – elsewhere – that my nervous concern about that everpresent possiblility got me to thinking about it again.

It suddenly occurred to me: those little yellow whatcha-macallems! And so began my odyssey through the city's halls, which culminated this month with the council's unanimous decision to have Botts' Dots installed on that curve right away and "at least temporarily," pending results of the engineering study. The advantages over painted yellow lines? The disks are permanent and easily seen, especially at night; and most important, they warn the driver that he or she has strayed across the center line.

Earlier opinions that Botts' Dots are "citified," "not Carmel," while still somewhat prevalent, have finally given way to the city's concern about a dangerous situation on what is already a bus and truck route through residential areas.

I still don't know why the dots sprang up recently on newly-paved, wide and straight San Carlos Street. (One city official told me that now when he drives down that street at night, he thinks he is on a runway at O'Hare.) I also don't know who made the decision to put the dots there; investigative journalism only goes so far with this columnist. I rest my case at the corner of Santa Fe and Third. For now.

OH YES, Mr. Botts. It seems that he and Mrs. Botts were out for a Sunday drive and she was giving him a bad time because he kept going over the yellow line. He mused: "It would be easier if I could feel that line; I'd know where I was." A good inventor, he didn't leave it at that, but began experimenting. In due course: Botts' Dots!

GARAGE SALE mania? On the Labor Day weekend, with just a few garage sales scheduled in this area, one seller advertised that he would post directional signs for his sale at 9 a.m. (no address given; only the one clue that it was off Carmel Valley Road at Rio Vista). Well before 9, would-be shoppers, awaiting further instructions, lined up in their cars – at least a dozen of them – at Rio Vista where it branches off to Canada Road. Others drove aimlessly up Rio Vista, looking for tell-tale signs of activity. Promptly at 9, the seller did post signs – right there at the Rio Vista/Rotunda Drive intersection. The mystery was solved! The sale was just a block away, on Rotunda.

SPLENDID SENIORS

After listening for half an hour to all that Rosemary and Howard Matson are doing, I sat back in amazement. "Where do you get the energy you need for all that?"

Rosemary answered: "I can go out and exert energy as long as I have this to come back to.". She glanced out the window toward the Carmel Valley hills and forested canyons. "The sunshine and the green trees are restorative." She laughed. "The trips are strenuous physically and emotionally, but I keep in good condition by going on them!"

Rosemary was getting ready for an international women's peace seminar in the Crimea in October. Thirty delegates from America will be included and Rosemary was concerned at the moment about getting a Native American woman to complete the respresentation of our country "as it really is." It's a "grassroots" seminar, a phrase that seems to describe much of what these citizen diplomats are doing.

I was reminded of Hume Cronym and Jessica Tandy, who share their lives with great respect for each other. Rosemary speaks most often, but Howard misses nothing and she is quick to give him full credit for his activities and support. Howard is a Unitarian minister who retired at 65 and went to work full-time for the farm worker ministry. After having a second home in Carmel Valley for more than 20 years, they settled permanently in their present hilltop home 12 years ago. Rosemary left her job as assistant to the president of a theological school in Berkeley at that time. Today, she continues in that field as a Humanist counselor.

One of Howard's first challenges after the couple settled here was the writing and publishing of his first book, A Walk to the Village, "a book to lift one's spirits and intensify one's sympathies," according to a review by Carmel's Mary Morain. Rosemary went to Copenhagen for a United Nations conference for women, where she met Soviet representatives and also a Santa Cruz woman, Patricia Schroeder, who became her partner in many peace-related activities. As Rosemary puts it, the basis for these peace workshops in the midst of the cold was her belief that "if the men can't get along the women can at least stretch out their hands in friendship."

At that time, Soviet people couldn't travel freely, so Rosemary and the Americans she gathered – both men and women – went to them, "just to put a face on the enemy." Now Rosemary, 72, has just had her 20th trip, while Howard, who is 83, can count a dozen. What does Howard do while his wife of 35 years travels afar in the interest of world peace? He continues his part-time role of "house-husband," and travels, too: the upper Carmel Valley Road to King City is one of his favorite excursions. Whether Rosemary is in residence or not, Howard supports her activities by typing, going for copies, going to the bank, and organizing a fund-raising project. (His current drive is to offer free copies of A Walk to the Village to anyone who contributes any amount to Continuing the Peace Dialogue.) And he writes articles, stories out of his own life and thoughts about childhood, feminism and "the awakening that can heal our planet." Rosemary comments: "Howard is a wonderful story-teller."

There are three more concerns central to Rosemary's journeys: fostering sister city relationships (the latest being Santa Cruz and the Crimean city of Alushta), a student exchange, and a Soviety-style New Forum. May Waldroup, a leader of the lcoal New Forum group, asked Rosemary if she could set it up in the Soviet ("I want it in Yalta"), and being Rosemary, she said she could. And she did. "Being there, right in the same room where Roosevelt, Stalin and Churchill met for the Yalta Conference, gave me goose pimples," Rosemary said.

The need for a complete ban of nuclear tests now occupies much of the Matsons' thoughts and energy. That's where both Rosemary and Howard were last May: in Semipalatinsk, a Soviet nuclear test site, to meet and demonstrate for the renewal of the Soviet unilateral testing moratorium, and to appeal to the leaders of all nuclear testing nations to halt, worldwide. Rosemary describes that as "a powerful experience," including as it did people from both the United States and the Soviet who had been directly affected by the testing. Mary Ross of Monterey is working with the Matsons to develop an anti-test coalition.

At this point in the interview I had to ask: "Why do you choose to do all this now?" The answer: "Who better to work on it? We have the time, whereas younger people are struggling with families and jobs."

Expressing that thought somewhat differently, there is a small needlepoint sampler on the wall above the Matsons' kitchen counter. It once belonged to the late Helen Arnold, a member of Carmel's city council. Helen's daughter, Mary, thought that her mother would want her friends the Matsons to have it. So there it sits, testimony to the spunk of this energetic couple, and to the irreverance with which they treat aging: "Screw the golden years."

POLICE LOG

There it was...gone

A VISITOR from Corona del Mar was doing some enjoyable strolling and shopping in the business area of Carmel on Sept. 15, and bought "a special something" at a store along the way.

However, when she was attempting to make a purchase at a second establishment, she discovered that her wallet – which she just had previously – was missing. The wallet, which contained $600 in cash, has not yet been recovered. Police have no suspects.

EMPLOYEES AT Buff LeGrange Boutique, located at Lincoln Street and Ocean Avenue, reported to police on Sept. 15, the disappearance of a men's jacket estimated at $1,650. The police have no suspects. However, particularly well-dressed men may be eyed suspiciously.

THE OWNER of a 1972 light blue Ford van went to get into his car which he had parked at the center island on Junipero Avenue between Third and Fourth Avenue. Unfortunately, he discovered the vehicle had been taken. The van, which had been left over the weekend from Sept. 14 to Sept. 17, has not yet been recovered, according to the police.

Back-to-School Night at CMS is Sept. 26

CARMEL MIDDLE School will hold its annual Back-to-School Night at 7 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 26 at the middle school gym.

A copy of the students' schedules will be available so parents can follow a minimum bell schedule and hear from each of their students' teachers.

Meals on Wheels needs volunteers

DRIVERS AND other volunteers are needed to deliver 200 meals daily to shut-ins and the handicapped on the peninsula for Meals on Wheels.

According to Chuck Poland, a Carmel volunteer, 200 homes are served with three meals five days a week from Carmel Valley to Marina, but 22 volunteer drivers are needed daily to deliver those meals.

"We were seven drivers short the other day," said Poland, who has been pressed into service so often that he's driving almost daily now. "It means a lot to these people. You thank your lucky stars when you leave."

Poland said there are 22 routes, three of them in the Carmel area. One route usually takes from 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. (including driving to and from the pick-up point in Pacific Grove).

Each shut-in is delivered a breakfast, one cold meal (usually sandwich, salad and juice), and one hot meal. He added that volunteers are also needed to make sandwiches and salads at the Meals On Wheels facility at 700 Jewell Ave. in Pacific Grove.

Almost all of the help is from volunteers, Poland said, so often the agency ends up shorthanded. If you would like to volunteer to help out, contact Meals on Wheels at 375-4454.

Meals on Wheels is a non-profit organization.

ROUNDUP

Design a 'sculptural vehicle'

Imagine a field of multi-colored sculpture. Combine that with the festive pageantry of a soap box derby and the surrealism of an artists' Concours d' Elegance and you have the basic elements of the First Art Day Kinetic Soap Box Derby.

Art Day festival – a day-long array of programs, demonstrations and events focusing on the arts – encourages local artists to design moving sculpture for the Kinetic Soap Box Derby, set Saturday, Oct. 20 at Monterey Peninsula College.

Participants in the race/exhibit are invited to design sculptural vehicles which will be raced down a gentle incline, with winning works selected on artistic merit as well as speed.

Entries must be manned by the artist and cannot be motorized. Artwork must be able to roll and include at least minimum steering characteristics.

Awards will be given for the fastest sculpture. Artistic winners wil be displayed in a local gallery following the contest.

Monterey County Artist's Day will include a workshop on health and safety in the arts media by Monona Rossol; a lecture and slide presentation by Jim Schietinger, videos, discussions, displays and a reception.

Entry for the Kinetic Sculpture Race is $20 and includes all of the day's events and the reception. Registration must be received by Monday, Oct. 8. Late registration is $25 at the door.

For more information abut the Kinetic Sculpture Race, call 624-7491. For information regarding Artday events, call 375-2208.

SPCA needs towels, linens

A plea to the general public is being made by the SPCA of Monterey County for clean towels, sheets, blankets and pillowcases for use in the animal shelter and wildlife center.

Blankets are used as comforters for the many puppies who are brought to the shelter because no one wants them. Prior to their being adopted, the shelter staff tries to make them as comfortable as possible and using blankets helps.

The greatest demand is for clean towels both in the shelter and in the wildlife center.

Donated items can be delivered to the SPCA animal shelter, 1002 Monterey-Salinas Highway 68 (across from Laguna Seca Recreation Area) any day of the week between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. If the donor has a significant quantity and cannot deliver them to the shelter, arrangements can be made to pick them up.

For more information, call 373-2631 or 422-4721.

Peninsula concert band rehearses

The Monterey Peninsula Concert Band rehearses at 7 p.m. Thursdays in the Monterey Peninsula College Music Hall.

The band is offered as an MPC class and welcomes all interested musicians. Band members, who share a love and enjoyment of playing music, represent a diversity of ages, backgrounds and abilities.

Musicians interested in more information may call John Anderson, conductor, at 646-4200 or 625-6641.

Volunteers needed to aid sea otters

Want to learn about our local sea otters and help ensure their survival? Friends of the Sea Otter needs a few people to greet visitors, hand out educational material, and sell merchandise at their Sea Otter Center in the Carmel Crossroads. To find out about this and other opportunities, call 373-2747.

Artists invited to join fair

The Monterey/Santa Cruz County Gallery Association is now calling for artists who wish to participate in the 1990 Carmel Art Festival, set Oct. 13-14 at the Mission Ranch Cottages, Carmel.

Activities will include an outdoor arts and crafts fair featuring more than 40 arts and crafts booths, an indoor painting and sculpture exhibit, lanscape painting contest, entertainment, plus wine and food sales. For more information, send S.A.S.E. to M.S.C.C.G.A., Box 7884, Santa Cruz, CA 95061, or call 462-2031.

Heron collection finds a home

famous early dwellers as they continue sorting through the collection this week.

Approximately $32,000 has been spent on the materials and Frinds of the Library President Cecil Wahle said more items will be purchased in the near future.

"Every time we open a box, we find interesting things," said library assistant archivist Nancy Springer Ochs. "I cried when I opened a box and said, 'These say Ashland, Massachusetts!' This is a tiny, tiny town where my mother was born. Apparently, Heron ordered supplies for the Forest Theater from there."

Heron was twice the mayor of Carmel during the early part of this century. He founded the Forest Theater, and fell in with a Bohemian literary group that included writer Mary Austin and poet George Sterling.

"I think the photographs are wonderful," said library archivist Dr. Linda Miles Coppens. "Some of these show George Sterling in an extremely informal pose."

Wahle said San Francisco bookseller John Crichton added many items to the collection free of charge. Among these are a hand-sewn kimono used in a 1920s Forest Theater production, a prop knife and dozens of old theater posters.

Wahle said the Friends board had donated $4,000 (out of proceeds from their annual book sale), toward the purchase of the Heron materials.

Springer Ochs said there will be a reception at the Park Branch at 6 p.m. on Oct. 12, and the library staff welcomes "the entire Carmel community" to come and see the collection. She added, however, that the staff has not yet had time to go through all the novelties.

Thirty-five Sonnets, a 1917 work by Sterling is inscribed:

"Dear Bert: These sonnets were written in a serious mood, and should be read in the same. Sonnets are out of date. Yours also, George Sterling. San Francisco, California."

Heron was a stock theater actor in Los Angeles before coming to Carmel in the 1900s. The group of authors and playwrights he associated with often congregated in George Sterling's private Bohemian grove on his property in Carmel.

There, they lit bonfires and exchanged poetry over roasted mussels. Sterling composed "The Abalone Song" at these gatherings. Carmel revelers still recite this poem at local shindigs to this day.

'When someone writes a book about Jack London, primary sources are consulted. These materials have never been incorporated in a book.'

— Margaret Pelikan

Sterling's mentor, author Ambrose Bierce called Heron's gang "something like, 'a nest of anarchists,' " Miles Coppens said.

The collection should be on display in the local history room at the library's Park Branch "some time in the future," according to Springer Ochs.

(Editor's Note: We're pleased to announce that Barbara March as joined the staff of the Carmel Pine Cone and Pacific Grove Monarch as our new society columnist. Barbara is a full-time independent writer whose credits include a polo article in the current issue of Palm Springs Life, and a forthcoming article on art galleries in Honolulu for Pleasant Hawaii.

SIMIC GALLERIES' Ed King is ready for the next big opening; the Annual Seascape Show, scheduled for this weekend. (Ray A. March photos.)

PACIFIC GROVE artist Anita Benson loves gallery openings. "I always try to support my friends."

Another Opening, Another Show

A LARGE piece of the peninsula social pie is served up by the art community. It celebrates, promotes and educates the rest of us in various ways, but most frequently the art gallery "opening" is a favorite excuse for artists and galleries to show off and schmooze.

In some communities church socials and athletic events are prime networking territory and these gatherings receive their fair share of attention on the peninsula. But none can match the strategic cross-marketing that a gallery mailing list provides.

A typical opening could include the artist, the artist's family, immediate and extended, family friends, fellow artists, wannabe artists and the framer, who often takes a large portion of the credit for the artist's success. That's the first layer. Then come distant admirers and former classmates, business people adding to their rolodex collections, ex-spouses, couples who need an evening away from the kids, and an occasional bag lady.

Not often noted is the gallery-goer. A gallery-goer is your died-in-the-wool pro who knows which gallery serves local Chardonnay and the best quiche. This rare bird has been known to call a few favorite galleries to inquire about the upcoming schedule of events and menu. They're known to all gallery directors and treated with utmost courtesy and discretion.

Ed King, administrative vice president at Carmel's Simic Galleries, handles the gallery-goer with ease.

"Sure, we have a few people who come for the refreshments, but we try not to take a negative position. We welcome locals, but 70 to 80 percent of the people who attend our openings are from out of town; buyers who come specifically for a show and then make a long weekend out of it."

On the brink of embarking into the art opening mainstream, Terry Trotter, of Trotter Galleries in Pacific Grove, is starting a major renovation that will transform his treasure-trove gallery of 19th and 20th century California art into a major gallery space. Grand opening scheduled for December.

Two blocks down Forest at the Pacific Grove Art Center, Anita Benson offers an artist's perspective on the "opening."

"I'm one of those artists who don't answer their phones when they're at work in the studio. So I go to the openings to talk to people. It's how we artists keep in touch with each other. We talk shop. Like where the best shows are and who's buying."

But that's not Anita's only reason. "Openings are like birthday parties, we celebrate what an artist has accomplished."

Her favorite openings? "The old Gallery Seven shows when Louise Cardeiro-Boyer would bring her homemade brownies."

What would an art opening be without food? When Pam Aronson of Aronson Catering is asked about the numerous gallery openings she has catered for, she reads it off like a recipe.

"Finger food, clean food, no crumbs. Fresh flowers, elegance. Has to look good. Quantity is important but presentation is paramount."

What are the current favorites on gallery directors' menus?

Pam responds, "The antipasto platter, crudite, cheese and fruit, champagne, Chardonnay and mineral water."

Gallery openings are many things to many people, but one thing if for certain, they're abundant and fun. Plan to attend one or two this fall season and don't forget to look at what's on the wall.

CRAIG McFARLAND of Carmel and Bill Dobson, noted Pebble Beach Concours judge and classic car expert, put the finishing touches on McFarland's '59 Rolls. The car won first place in its class. (Ray A. March photos.)

PAM ARONSON has catered over 50 gallery openings in Carmel Rancho and Crossroads area galleries. "Elegant presentation is most important."

ELEANOR AND Windom Estes used toothbrushes, elbow grease and loving care on their MG Roadster and took home a prize at the Santa Barbara Concours.

HONORARY JUDGE Strother MacMinn checks out the details on this entry in the Santa Barbara Concours. MacMinn is chief honorary judge at the Pebble Beach Concours.

SANTA BARBARA CONCOURS D'ELEGANCE

The Santa Barbara Concours doesn't bill itself as "second only to Pebble Beach" anymore. Last weekend's picnic-on-a-polo-field has found its true identity as a relaxed, family-oriented afternoon devoted to world-class collector cars. A quick survey of entrants and enthusiasts revealed that while the Pebble Beach Concours will always be considered the pinnacle, shows like Santa Barbara are developing their own niche.

A quick look through the Santa Barbara entries and judges list turned up about a dozen cars that showed at Pebble and everyone's favorite honorary judge, Strother MacMinn. Carmel's congenial Chris Bock was an invited judge but had to cancel at the last minute.

Craig McFarland of Carmel had two entries at this year's Santa Barbara, a 1963 Bentley one-of-a-kind convertible that once belonged to the Shah of Malaysia and a 1959 "sand over sable" convertible Rolls Royce that won its class.

But what Craig is really turned on about is the Rolls Royce Phantom 4AF6 he is currently restoring in preparation for the National Rolls Royce Meet scheduled for August 1991 at Pebble Beach. This two-door convertible was one of a group of cars manufactured for royalty with the stipulation that if it were no longer in use it would be returned to the factory and destroyed. Its owner, the Shah of Persia, filled the ashtrays and the car was returned and parted out to employees.

With the help of Bill Dobson, another Pebble Beach name, Craig sleuthed it down and is putting it back together again, piece by piece.

He'll be happy to show you photos, just ask him.

Also at the Santa Barbara Concours were Windom and Eleanor Estes of Pebble Beach with their 1932 blue MG Roadster J2. Windom, chairman of the selection committee for the Monterey Concours, believes in hands on restoration and has spent countless hours lovingly restoring the cars in his collection. Treated like members of the family, the Estes cars are driven until Windom decides to put them on the show circuit.

A favorite is an ivory MG that Eleanor used to drive to work every day.

"One day I came home and Windom said my car needed a paint job," Eleanor said. "He put it up on blocks to re-paint it and the next thing I knew he had entered it in a concours. After two years of successful campaigning I announced that I was going to take the car to work. Well, it wasn't the same. Once you show a car you can't drive it again."

The '32 blue MG Roadster, by the way, rolled away with second prize in its class at Santa Barbara.

PEEPS

PACIFIC GROVE jazz writer Bill Minor and his wife Betty recently returned from a jazz tour of Russia as guests of the USSR Composer's Union.

On their way, the Renaissance couple stopped off in Boston where Bill, who writes regularly for Downbeat, Jazz Times and Coda, among others, interviewed Igor Butman, a Russian emigre jazz musician.

Bill shared this vignette with us:

"Before he immigrated to the United States, Igor, who is considered the best tenor sax player in the Soviety Union, played in the Soviet's only jazz club for $10 a night. As he was getting his visa stamped for immigration to the U.S. the Russian customs agent laughed and told Igor, 'you will end up playing in the streets!'

"Arriving in Boston, Igor took the agent's advice, and selected a space in Boston's Harvard Square for his first U.S. performance. When the impromptu set was over Igor had $40 in the hat, four times as much as he had been paid in the only jazz club in Russia!"

WHERE'S A paramedic when you need one? No one seems to want to say it first, but the life seems to be gone from Monterey Life. Too bad to see one less publication on the peninsula.

DO YOU remember what you received for your birthday last year?

Kevin Cartwright of Pebble Beach won't forget her latest, celebrated recently with a group of friends in the private Library Dining Room at The Lodge.

Kevin, who is a board member of Youth Music Monterey, was deeply moved by a most unusual gift. Led by Ann Jamison, Kevin's cronies funded a scholarship in her name for a deserving young music student at next summer's Youth Music Monterey Classical Camp held at Robert Louis Stevenson. Now that's a gift everyone can enjoy.

THE HOLMAN RANCH, REMEMBERED

The Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce Mixer, held at the Holman Ranch, brought back fond memories for many of the valley merchants who attended.

Members entered the Spanish grandee living room and then peeked into the Charlie Chaplin bedroom, where one local observed, "Charlie must have slept here, the bed is so small." They bopped past the game room where the jukebox was playing Del Shannon's Runaway and settled into patio picnic tables for a barbecue provided by Holman Ranch owners, Dorothy McEwen and Jim Fitch.

Dorothy was quick to credit her "team" of Holman Ranch residents who pitched in and pulled off an evening that chamber president, Dr. Steve Austin, admitted was one of the best chamber mixers he has seen. Residents who volunteered to help prepare for the event are enthusiastic about the changes and caring spirit that Dorothy and Jim have shown around the old place.

Other groups that have recently enjoyed the old California heritage of the Holman Ranch have included the Bach Festival, Forest Theater, and Carmel Valley Property Owners Association.

FOOTBALL

The Padre Varsity football team tied Santa Cruz (13-13) in a hard-fought game Friday (9/14) at Santa Cruz High School. The Padres punched through an apparent game-winning touchdown with less than 30 seconds remaining only to have it called back by an unusual "aiding the runner" penalty. A subsequent field goal attempt looked good until the officials decided to call it otherwise.

Carmel had nearly 300 yards total offense and dominated the Cardinals on numerous fine defensive stands. Brandon Gesicki, Richard Johnston, and Chris Bobb played excellent defense. Dan Kurz and Mark Fanderl gained tough yardage running the ball. Tobin Leslie had a solid game of both catching and running, and Forest Aldrich did an outstanding job of blocking on the offensive line. The Padres gained 19 first downs compared to the Cardinal's seven. Carmel next faces San Lorenzo Valley on Saturday (9/22) at SLV.

The Junior Varsity lost to Santa Cruz (22-6) despite great offensive play by Jeff Saunders, who scored the sole touchdown for the Padres and ran well all night along with John Tedrow and Mark Garza. The team combined for almost 200 yards rushing. Coaches also cited lineman Rich Simmons for his efforts in the game.

The Frosh team lost 62-0 to a Santa Cruz team which largely played together on an undefeated seventh-grade Pop Warner team. Coaches Ables and Melicia will be working to improve the team's tackling in preparation for next week's contest against SLV. Bright spots in the game were plays by Peter Jepson, Todd Watts, and Robert Schaffer.

VOLLEYBALL

The Carmel girls volleyball team opened its pre-season schedule with losses to Seaside (1-3), Monterey (0-3), and San Lorenzo Valley (0-3). Head coach Jim Helgason commended the play of Marni Marasco in their contest against Seaside. After one more non-league match against Watsonville (9/17), the Padre girls open at home against Alisal at the Carmel gymnasium beginning at 4 p.m. Admission to home matches is free and everyone is invited.

CROSS COUNTRY

The CHS cross country team opened its season at the Robert Louis Stevenson Invitational Saturday (9/15), at the RLS home course in Pebble Beach. The top five Carmel runners finished in the fastest 20 from a field of over 50 contestants. The X-C team competes next at Toro Park on Monday (9/24), at the first MTAL center meet.

GIRLS TENNIS

CARMEL FOUNDATION CELEBRATES 40 YEARS

The Carmel Foundation, a fixture in the community which dedicates itself to offering vital services and programs for the older citizens of the area, will celebrate its 40th Anniversary on Sunday, Sept. 23.

The program will begin at 1 p.m. adjacent to Diment Hall at the foundation and will be followed by refreshments, music and special historical displays commemorating the center's 40 years of community service and those who have made the foundation the "centerpiece" it is.

According to John L. Freitas, executive director of the Carmel Foundation, "The foundation owes its long-term development and success to a perfect blend of five ingredients: generous members, active volunteers, dedicated staff, an involved board of directors and a supportive community." The public is invited to visit the Carmel Foundation and share in this special celebration.

FIESTA TIME AGAIN AT CARMEL MISSION

Strap on the feed bags and put on your dancing shoes, it's the 26th annual Fiesta de San Carlos Borromeo at the Carmel Mission Basilica courtyard, set for noon to 5 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 30.

The celebration, honoring the patron saint of the mission, will be serving up such delicacies as a chicken barbecue, complete with salsa and salad for $7, along with other goodies like tacos, burritos, hot dogs, cotton candy, popcorn and ice cream. Libations of wine, beer and soft drinks will also be served.

Bruna Odello, co-ordinator of this year's festivities refers to the fiesta as "a joyous event bringing our community together in celebration and to break bread with one another. The fiesta benefits Junipero Serra School and numerous varied clubs."

She says of the mission itself, "It's a very special spot. People enjoy coming here, it offers a sense of spiritual enrichment. The mission just has wonderful vibes."

Father Junipero Serra, the founder of the California Missions, is buried at the Carmel Mission Basilica, which is a parish church as well as an historic monument.

Adding to the day's festivities will be an afternoon of Spanish-Mexican entertainment with the Mariachi Mixtlan; the Grupo Folklorico-Mexicana Xocipilli from San Jose, a Mexican folk dancing group; Javiar Sanchez-Lozano, flamenco singer and guitarist; and the children from Junipero Serra School under the direction of Serena Underwood.

There will be games for young and old alike, along with 65 assorted arts and crafts display booths.

The celebration is sponsored by all the parish organizations. Admission to the fiesta is free.

For more information call the Carmel Mission at 624-1271.

NUCLEAR WEAPONS PHYSICIST TO SPEAK SEPT. 24

Dr. Ted Taylor, former nuclear weapons physicist, will speak on "Proposals for a Comprehensive Nuclear Test Ban Treaty" Monday, Sept. 24, at 3 p.m. in Lecture Forum 103 at MPC.

Taylor worked with Dr. Edward Teller on both the atom and hydrogen bombs in the 50s. Today he is active in the anti-nuclear weapons movement and advocates that our administration vote for a comprehensive test ban treaty during the upcoming meeting of the United Nations in January 1991. Our government currently opposes that treaty ratification.

Sponsoring Taylor's appearance will be the newly formed Monterey Peninsula Comprehensive Test Ban Coalition consisting of 10 local organizations and Monterey Peninsula College. The new coaliation is planning a series of activities between now and the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty Conference in New York City next January.

Mary Ross of the local Beyond War Chapter states that "It is immoral that the only two nations of the World that currently oppose the treaty are the United States and Great Britain," and "further testing will only lead to continuation of the nuclear arms race with the Soviet Union and the development of a new generation of these weapons of genocide."

CARMEL JUNIOR ENDS TENNIS SUMMER WITH VICTORY

Kelley Sweeney has made the summer transition from middle school to "freshperson" at Robert Louis Stevenson in triumphant fashion, by capturing the girls' 14-and-under tennis title in the sanctioned State Fair Tournament played over the Labor Day weekend at the Rollingwood Racquet Club, Sacramento.

Sweeney, soon to be 14 and seeded fourth in the tournament, swept through the second seed in the semi-finals, and then came back the next day for a straight set 7-6 (7-3), 6-0 victory over number 1 seeded Aubrie Rippner of Chico.

The victory in this tournament, which draws players from all over Northern California, has been pretty much the summer routine for her. The last three tournaments in which she has entered, she has managed to reach the finals three times, winning two and losing a tough struggle in the other. Such results bode for a high ranking in the very competitive Northern California's girls 14 and under tennis.

John Monnier, tennis professional at Carmel's Mission Tennis Ranch and current coach of Sweeney's, feels that such a ranking will only be a harbinger of things to come.

"Kelley has tremendous athletic ability," he said. "That coupled with her desire to improve stroke production could lead to a national ranking by the time she is playing in 16-and-under tournaments."

Actually she is but one of several promising local junior tennis players under Monnier's tutelage. Others who also have enjoyed a successful summer campaign on the hard courts of California, and who will also more than likely enjoy high sectional rankings in their age group include: Jerry Ledzinski, age 17; Justin Ledzinski, 16; Daniel Brown, 15; Nicholas Garrone, 10; Chris Chatman, 12 and Briana Schaffer, age 13.

For more information on the junior tennis program underway at Mission Tennis Ranch contact Jeff Doyle at 624-4335.

FATHER FARRELL'S WISDOM

Thoughts on marriage

From Sept. 23, 1982
Carmel Pine Cone

A woman was talking to her pastor on the morning of her 50th wedding anniversary – a golden one that few couples reach. He asked her if she had ever thought of divorce. She replied: Divorce, never. Murder – yes, but not divorce." In Spanish we call this kind of a story a "Christe."

A couple with the reputation of being very religious fought from morning to night about everything. They said divorce was out of the question but finally the husband said that it was impossible to go on as they were, so he proposed they pray for a solution. "Let's pray for the Lord to take one of us and then I'll go home and live with my mother."

The noble concept of a spouse willing to lay down his or her life for the other can deteriorate into demand for one of them to become a slave. A child's love is rooted in the need to be significant for someone and adult life is the same. The partners make a deliberate choice to make concessions and these must be constantly reviewed.

We should pray for stable and happy marriages. Pray that Almighty God may love someone through you and may God love you through someone. Marriage is a contract made in heaven, but it is worked out in an hour-to-hour application of putting kindness and consideration into practice.

The local lush says "She won't marry me when I'm drunk. But I won't marry her when I'm sober." Who's the lucky one?

The Golden Years

Senior citizens in Frankfurt, West Germany, who have limited incomes still get to go on vacations. Elderly couples with incomes under $7,500 qualify for that city's free vacation program — transportation, room and meals for two or three weeks during the "off season" at one of several resorts. Seniors with higher incomes can join in by paying part or all of the costs, which range from $275 to $600 per person.

When it comes to elections, people over 65 outdo all other age groups in the proportion who turn out to vote. In the 1988 presidential election, more than 68 percent of Americans 65 or older cast votes. Participation by younger voters fell to a record low in that election, and the 65-and-over age group was the only one which showed an increase in turnout. Mobility problems probably account for a decline in voting for those 75 and over. Even so, in the last four national elections people 75 or older were found to be more likely to vote than those under 35.

CRITIC AT LARGE

Jazz Festival Blues

BY NOW everyone knows that the 33rd annual Monterey Jazz Festival blows into town this weekend...sold out well in advance.

But take heart jazz and blues fans, there are ways to get in and be a part of the biggest annual musical event on the Central Coast, and it doesn't take scaling the fence and dodging security guards, either. But more on that later.

Blues fans should especially take heart because the festival has scheduled the strongest Saturday blues afternoon lineup in recent memory, not only in the vast and rowdy Pattee (Main) Arena, but in the more intimate Garden Stage on the grounds of the Monterey Fairgrounds.

The main arena's blues show (1:30 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 22), features harpist extraordinaire Charlie Musselwhite with special guest Yank Rachell, one of the few blues mandolin players around; Katie Webster, the "Swamp Boogie Queen" with the Vasti Jackson Band; blues shouter Etta James & the Roots Band; slide guitarist Ron Thompson; and the legendary John Lee Hooker in a "Tribute to John Lee Hooker," that should be a blues blowout to end all blowouts.

Not to be outdone, festival organizers have put together a Garden Stage show that should have Main Stage ticket holders running back and forth between the two venues yelling, "No fair!" Here goes: keyboardist Mark Naftalin (a veteran of the Paul Butterfield Blues Band and a Bay Area favorite); Ron Thompson; Maurice Kemp; Margie Baker; Maurice McKinnies; Bobbie Webb & Smooth Blues featuring Vivian Irving; Yank Rachell; Katie Webster; Al Rapone & the Zydeco Express; Bluesman Willie and Yolanda Briggs with the South Street Runners; Charlie Musselwhite Blues Band; John Lee Hooker & the Coast-to-Coast Blues Band; Paul Soderman & Boulder Blues Club; vocalist Kitty Margolis and sax player Harvey Wainapel Quartet (whew!).

Garden Stage show is a 12:15 p.m. start and should go well into Saturday afternoon.

Now how to get those precious ducats. First, the easy way: walk up to the box office at the fairground's main entrance and buy a grounds admission ticket. That will allow you to roam the grounds at will, soaking in all the atmosphere and character that is the Monterey Jazz Festival and take in the Garden Stage and Night Club shows. The only thing it doesn't allow you to do is to get into the Main Arena. You win some, you lose some.

The second option is to buy a ticket at the gate from someone selling tickets. Now before you start moaning, "But I don't want to pay scalper's prices," listen up. It's against the law in California to sell tickets outside an event for more than the value printed on the ticket, even if you did pay more than face value somewhere else. Thus, you'll rarely if ever find real scalpers outside the gates of the festival.

Most of the people selling tickets outside the fairgrounds are season ticket holders who bought their tickets sight unseen back in May, back when they were still married, or didn't have a baby, or had a job, or lived in the country etc., etc. They just want to sell the tickets for what they paid for them, many times they'll even settle for less, just to get rid of them and get into the show. I've even seen ticketholders give tickets away because they didn't want to hassle with trying to sell them.

Just get there early enough and don't pay any more for the ticket than what's printed on it. If possible, have a chart of the arena on hand to see where you'll be sitting. You can even be choosy...up to a point.

You'll be amazed at some of the seats that are available. I should know, I've had to sell decent seats for my friends because they couldn't make it one year because the husband broke his ankle. But if that doesn't work out, you can always buy a grounds admission ticket, at least you can see most of the same performers and tell everyone you were at the Monterey Jazz Festival.

AS LONG as we're on festivals, the San Francisco Blues Festival held last weekend should become a primer for anyone even considering mounting their own blues festival.

It has to be one of the most well-organized, well-run festivals with a exemplary lineup that covers a variety of styles, from Chicago blues to zydeco to R&B. The view overlooking San Francisco Bay and the Golden Gate Bridge is breathtaking, and the atmosphere is fun and relaxed. Even the food and beverages aren't your run-of-the-mill county fair junk that's often passed off as edible at other musical events. We're talking gourmet pizzas, grilled eggplant with pesto sauce, chicken fajitas, jambalaya, calamari, Cajun delicacies and even margaritas and cappuccino, for crying out loud!

And the music? It's amazing how producer Tom Mazzolini manages to put together such a high quality, yet eclectic, lineup year after year (this was the 18th year of the festival, the longest continually running one in the country). This year not only featured such established acts as Albert Collins, Koko Taylor and Johnny Otis, but up-and-comers such as zydeco hotshot Wayne Toups and Zydecajun, roots rockin' blues from The Paladins, street corner acoustic blues from Big Bones and Paul Pena, and even 80-year-old blues mandolin player Yank Rachell. How does he do it? Who cares as long as he continues.

Park dedication, home tour honor Mary Austin

By ANNE PAPINEAU

A PARCEL of land will be dedicated Saturday in remembrance of a Carmel maverick who helped identify the town as a writer's colony early in this century.

The dedication of Mary Austin Park will take place at 1:30 p.m. Saturday on the northeast corner of Monte Verde and Fourth in Carmel. The author's former home, located in the cul-de-sac east of the park, will be open to the public from 2 to 4 p.m. on park dedication day.

Staff from the Harrison Memorial Library will be on hand during the open house to answer questions about Mary Austin and to explain the items of Austin memorabilia that will be on display.

Mary Hunter Austin (1868-1934) was a prolific, much-published author who made her home in Carmel from 1904 to 1908. She counted other writers among her Carmel friends, including George Sterling, Jack London and Jimmy Hopper. In the late 1920s she befriended a promising young photographer, Ansel Adams. She considered the portrait he made of her "unflattering."

"In a sense she was very much ahead of her time," observed Linda Coppens, archivist for the collection of Carmel memorabilia housed at the Harrison Memorial Library Park Branch. "She was an environmentalist insistent upon keeping the land as it was, concerned with not polluting or destroying the landscape. She was very interested in Native American culture at a time when most were not. She had many Native American friends.

"She was an early advocate of women's rights, although I don't think she's think of calling herself a feminist."

"She was a very complex person," added Nancy Ochs, assistant archivist for the library. "She really believed in the power of prayer and organized religion. She was allowed to mingle with the men who were members of the Bohemian Club, although she was never accepted as a member. She'd be found wandering about the groves of trees, wearing her long hair down, which was scandalous for that time."

During her Carmel years, Austin would write in an improvised treehouse on her property. She called the spot her "wick-i-up."

Austin wrote poetry, fiction and non-fiction, and even plays. One of her theater pieces, Fire, was staged at the Outdoor Forest Theater in 1913. It was the first production of theater founder Herbert Heron's Western Drama Society. One historian maintains that the Forest Theater was in fact Austin's idea, Coppens said.

Fire will be staged again at 2 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 14, as the closing production of the Carmel Shake-speare Festival. The reading will be directed by Jeff Hudelson at, appropriately, the Outdoor Forest Theater.

"She was strong and independent and feisty," Coppens explained. "She went her own way. She graduated from college in Illinois, which was rather unusual for a woman of her time. Her prose was beautiful, sensitive and very integral. She was also very talented in writing about local color, the Southwest in particular."

Among the books of Mary Austin are The Land of Little Rain, A Woman of Genius, The Land of Journey's Ending and an autobiography, Earth Horizon.

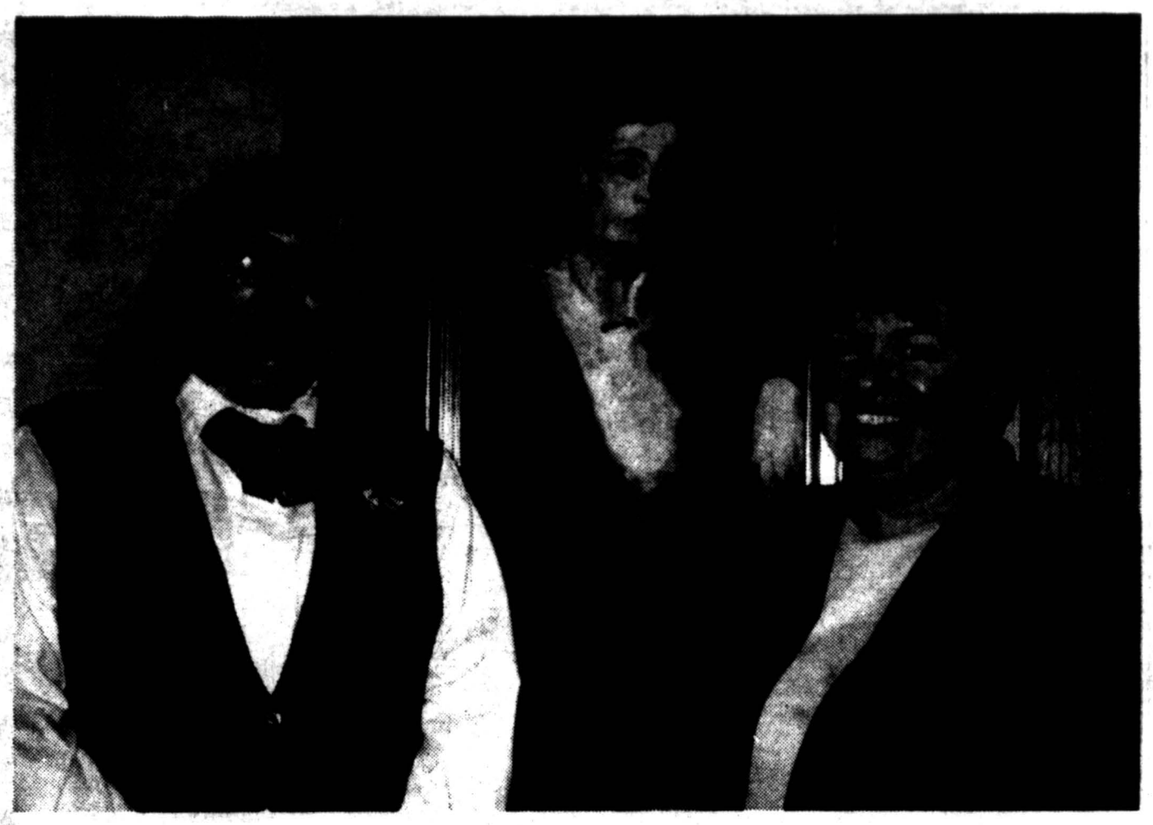
HER "wick-i-up" provided an inspirational writing spot for Carmel author Mary Austin.



NANCY OCHS (left) and Linda Coppens, archivists at the Harrison Memorial Library Park Branch, flank an oil portrait of Mary Austin. Dedication of Mary Austin Park will take place at 1:30 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 22 at the northeast corner of Monte Verde and Fourth in Carmel-by-the-Sea. (Anne Papineau photo).

One of her plays, The Arrow-Maker, was staged in New York. Austin also wrote magazine articles.

Appreciation is growing for Austin's work, Coppens added.

"A lot of her literary themes were about strong women who had to choose between marriage and career. I think that sex role issues were a big thing in her life," Coppens stated.

"I think being a woman back then, and being in the West, the Eastern establishment kind of looked down at her accomplishments. She's really just coming into her own now," she said.

Last November the Yale University Press published a new biography of Austin, Mary Austin – Song of a Maverick, by Esther Lanigan Stineman.

Nancy Ochs is currently at work designing a display for the Harrison Memorial Library Park Branch that will recreate the spirit of turn-of-the-century Carmel. It will feature vintage photographs of Mary Austin, George Sterling and their friends, copies of rare books, "The Abalone Song" written by Sterling, and other memorabilia. The exhibit will open to the public by the end of the month.

"Mary Austin was apparently kind of wild at the writer's colony parties," Ochs observed. "She'd dance around the bonfire in Greek dress, her hair flowing. She's an interesting person. I'm glad there's a revival of interest in her."

MARY HUNTER AUSTIN (1868-1934) was a founding member of the Carmel writers' colony that counted Jack London, Jimmy Hopper and George Sterling among its members. Austin's former home will be open to the public for tours from 2 to 4 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 22, following the dedication of Mary Austin Park. The path from the park to the house will be well marked. Tor House Foundation sponsors poetry readings

THE ROBINSON Jeffers Tor House Foundation, in cooperation with Monterey Peninsula College, will sponsor a reading by poets Morton Marcus and Carol Staudacher Saturday, Sept. 22. The 8 p.m. reading at Carpenter Hall in the Sunset Cultural Center in Carmel is the first in a series of programs for 1990-91.

Marcus is the author of six books of poems and one novel. A resident of Santa Cruz, he teaches at Cabrillo College and is co-host of a weekly poetry show on KUSP radio. He is on the permanent staff of the Foothill Writers Conference. Marcus, whose work appears frequently in national poetry journals, has presented readings at universities across the country.

The poet describes himself as "a spirited reader" who believes that oral presentation is the "lifeline of the poetic art." His latest book, Pages from a Scrapbook of Immigrants, is a sensitive chronicle of a family's journey from 19th century Russia to the shores of contemporary Monterey Bay. Each poem is a separate work, but when joined with the total, forms a narrative of the struggle to survive both physically and spiritually in two alien cultures.

Carol Staudaucher is a poet, non-fiction writer, and editor. Her poetry has been published in a variety of journals and anthologies, including The New York Quarterly, Primavera, Five Fingers Review, Poetry Flash, and others. She is represented in Lighthouse Point: An Anthology of Santa Cruz Writing, in Celebration of the Muse: An Anthology of Writing by Santa Cruz Women, and most recently in Touching Fire.

In 1988, her work won first prize in a nationwide poetry competition sponsored by Small Press Traffic in San Francisco.

Staudaucher is the author of Beyond Grief, a study of bereavement and a guide to coming to terms with its effects and emotions. She is currently completing Men and Grief, the second book of this series in the field of mental health.

Other programs Sunset Cultural Center planned for the 1990-91 season by the Tor House Foundation in cooperation with Monterey Peninsula College include the annual Robinson Jeffers Festival October 19-21 that will feature Paul Goldberger, Pulitizer Prize winner for architectural writing and senior architect critic for The New York Times. He will speak on "Architecture and Coastal Development in 'Jeffers Country'." The festival also will feature seminars on "The Letters of Robinson and Una Jeffers" and "The Jeffers We Knew." Speakers will be Marcia Kuster Rider and Gordon Newell.

"An evening with Charles Dickens" featuring actor Ashley Ramsden will be presented Feburary 16.

Forest Theater Guild plans shows

THE FOREST Theater Guild will take its show indoors this fall and winter at Carmel's Cherry Foundation Theater.

After several months of discussion, an agreement was reached for the Forest Theater Guild to stage four productions at the theater during the 1990-91 season.

"We're thrilled to carry on the tradition of the Forest Theater in a more intimate, indoor setting," said Peter Newman, president of the Forest Theater Guild. "Our play selections for our opening season lend themselves well to the ambience of Cherry Hall."

Premiering Nov. 9 will be Ernest Thompson's On Golden Pond, directed by Gregory de Silva. The second show, Don't Drink the Water, directed by Morgan Stock, will run April-May, 1991. This play was written by Woody Allen and will star Sam and Edie Karas.

Cherry Hall is located at Fourth and Guadalupe in Carmel. For further information on auditions, the Forest Theater or Cherry Hall, call 626-1681.

Festival of Firsts stages '411 Joseph' premiere

411 JOSEPH, winner of the 1990 Festival of Firsts Play-writing Competition, will have its world premiere Thursday, Sept. 20 at Sunset Theater in Carmel. The play is the first full-length work by Frawley Becker. It will also be a staged at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, Sept. 21-22.

Becker, from the Los Angeles area, has a varied background in the theater arts but is primarily involved in the film industry. He holds a B.A. in psychology from the University of Pennsylvania and received his B.F.A. in theater design from Oxford University. Becker has directed and produced in France, and has also been location manager for such films as Steel Magnolias, Footloose and Suspect.

Becker's prize-winning script, his first full-length play, has the action taking place at 411 Joseph (thus the title) in Rochester, New York. It is a touching, often comic look at the interplay of a Jewish family during the period of time from 1948 to 1969. Appearing in this premiere production are familiar peninsula performers. The play is directed by Peter DeBono, chairman of the Drama Department at Monterey Peninsula College, who has directed seven previous prize winners for the Carmel Festival of Firsts.

The Festival of Firsts Playwriting Competition is a project of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea Community and Cultural Commission and is in its 14th year. The festival's concept was conceived by the late Gunnar Norberg in 1976 to encourage, recognize and foster the art of playwriting. Since Carmel's early history was started by artists, and particularly writers, Norberg felt this heritage should be recognized and continued.

Under the guidance of Richard Tyler, former director of the Sunset Cultural Center, the first winning play was produced in 1978. In the years the festival has been in existance more than 4,500 plays have been read and considered for recognition.

Tickets for all performances are $5 and can be purchased in the Director's Office of Sunset Center, located at San Carlos and Ninth in Carmel, or at the box office on the evening of performance. They are also available at Center Stage Ticketing in Monterey, 649-5561. Please call 624-3996 for more information.

THEATER REVIEW

By Joan Swartz Paonessa

A broad and boisterous 'Dream'

GROVEMONT THEATER Outreach has opened its Fall 1990 Shake-speare Festival at the Outdoor Forest Theater with a broad and boisterous production of A Midsummer Night's Dream.

Readers of The Herald's Letters to the Editor may recall the controversy of some months ago in which several of GroveMont's executive staff members engaged in scholarly debate as to the identity of the man who wrote the plays and sonnets of Shakespeare. More such propaganda promoting the likelihood of Edward de Vere's authorship of the collection is to be found in the Festival's program, and in well-researched handouts at the theater entrance. It's interesting stuff, and merits a closer look – as always, the GroveMont program is rich in sidelights of this type, as well as historical and poetic references to the Midsummer play itself. Good reading!

Director Stephen Moorer accentuates the pratfalls and, thankfully, the diction in this version of the Dream, and the result is an obvious, emphatic and easily-understood presentation of one of the Bard's most frequently performed comedies.

The over-emphasis backfires in a few cases – the characters of Theseus and Hippolyta are played far too broadly, and Hermia's histrionics could do with a bit of trimming as well. Some subtle toning-down by these three talented performers (Henry Guevara, Nancy L. Bernhard, and Mickie Mosley Moorer, respectively), would bring them into better balance with the rest of the cast.

Players at the Outdoor Forest need to learn to believe in the efficacy of the theater's design, and to realize that, given proper lighting (very much so in the case of G. Crane Coleman's design here), those in even the top row of seats will catch a medium-sized gesture – the raising of an eyebrow, the inflection of a voice. Sublety need not be sacrificed in an attempt to convey humor. Actors, trust the lines!

Henry Littlefield is imposing and sympathetic in his portrayal of Hermia's father, Egeus. As Lysander and Demetrius, the two young suitors, Jeffrey T. Heyer and Ron Cohen are very good, Cohen conveying Demetrius' exasperation, Heyer earnest and sincere in the role of Lysander.

Dorian Ellis plays Helena, she of the dim eyes and pale self-esteem. It's a good comic turn, spoken in adenoidal tones which serve as a foil for Mosley-Moorer's strident protests as Hermia. The chemistry works between these two.

The company of rustics light up the stage with their energy and antic timing. Cal West (Quince), John Rousseau (Bottom), Norman L. Stottmeister (Flute), Mindy Stock (Snout), Craig Schow (Starveling), Roy Slater (Snug), and Christopher Heimer and Jim Bailey as the two Pats, work as a true comic acting ensemble, most notably in the scene in which the Prologues are discussed.

The Spirits in this production are outstanding. Susan Tiller (Queen Titania) and Kevin Nolan Caston (King Oberon) use their voices superbly while projecting a regal and otherworldly presence. Inspired casting gives us Jeff Hudelson as the Fairy, once again demonstrating his flair and versatility.

And now to Puck, that wily scamp, that playful gremlin, the devil-child ex machina who engineers the madness and the dream. Martin Sampad Kachuk is lithe and agile in the role, playing him more down-to-earth than others I've seen, a bit less fairy-like, a bit more naughty-boyish. It's a successful performance.

Lady Hull's costuming is a standout, from Titania's royal blue and silver to the Fairy's pink and fuchsia glitz, the Mechanicals' country garb, and the spare Athenian garments of the loving couples. The set design by Steve Judge is simple and flowing. Roy Slater and John Rousseau get credit for the fine special effects.

A Midsummer Night's Dream is one of Shakespeare's loveliest works, mood-evocative and suffused with color, tender and titillating, enlivening and diverting. GroveMont's presentation is an especially accessible one, and as such can be recommended strongly to aficionados and neophyte Shakespeare spectators alike!

It will play at 8 p.m., Thursday, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, through Oct. 13. Venue is the beautiful Outdoor Forest Theater, Santa Rita and Mountain View, Carmel. Warm clothing and a blanket to spread on the wooden seats are recommended. Tickets at the theater or in advance from Center Stage (649-5561). Reservations may be made at 649-6852.

JAZZ TIDES

By John Detro

FESTIVE TIME — Famed drawing by David Stone Martin incorporates Monterey Jazz Festival's trademark chair and trumpet. See Detro column for complete arena roster of 33rd annual bash this weekend. The Martin work comes from fest history compiled by Jimmy Lyons with writer Ira Kamin. This handsome book may be purchased at MJF headquarters on the fairgrounds.

To give and receive love

RALPH LIVES in heaven now, but his non-rules maintain. "A festival is to have fun," jazz critic Ralph Gleason wrote more than two decades back. "To have fun, to be festive, to give and receive love...It's not a posh concert hall where silence must be preserved...."

Gleason helped Jimmy Lyons shape the vision that became Monterey Jazz Festival. Those words appeared in the official fest program and bear repetition since the 33rd annual edition opens its weekend run on Friday evening (9/21) at our local fairgrounds.

For those who relish curtain-to-curtain participation, the MJF House Quartet has a six o'clock start time on the Garden Stage. Those same men — Tee Carson, Bruce Forman, Larry Grenadier, Vince Lateano — will open the first of five arena shows two hours later.

The grounds admission lineups ran here last week. There still may be a few arena tickets left. Check with the festival office (373-3366) because the main stage roster must be called one of the strongest ever:

Friday evening — House Quartet with guests like killer trombonist Jiggs Whigham, Donald Bailey, Red Holloway, Bill Berry, Don Paul McCaslin (this powerful young tenorman has been on the road with Gary Burton and came up through the MJF student system). Spyro Gyra with Jay Beckenstein, Christopher Hollyday Quartet, Ernestine Anderson, Poncho Sanchez, Tito Puente.

Saturday afternoon — Charlie Musselwhite Blues Band plus special guest Yank Rachell, Katie Webster with the Vasti Jackson Band, Etta James and her Roots Band, Ron Thompson, John Lee Hooker tribute starring the master bluesman and performers who admire him.

Saturday evening — Gerald Wilson Orchestra, Mel Brown Sextet, Joe Williams with the redoubtable Norman Simmons on piano, Oscar Peterson.

Sunday afternoon — Monterey County Honor Band (a project of MJF Education Committee). Winners in this year's statewide student competition: Hamilton High School Combo, Hamilton High Big Band, Soquel High Vocal Group, High School All-Star Band under Bill Berry's direction and with guest pros like Jiggs and Red. Then — Stan Getz Sextet.

Sunday evening — Stanley Turrentine Quintet, piansist Michel Petrucianni, Diane Reeves, Dizzy Gillespie Quintet.

MJF honcho Jimmy always has called the youth program his "favorite part" and its participants "my kids." At the same time, this festival's famous for its good treatment of adult artists too. That attitude helps build unusual warmth between jazz buffs and stars. And all the well-known characters will be staffing colorful booths along the walkabout spaces.

In case you're housebound, KUSP Radio of Santa Cruz again will carry live remotes from the main stage. That's 88.9FM. KRML Radio (1410AM) plans coverage of the Sunday afternoon student sets — a most worthy tradition over at the Carmel station.

Ralph again: "For this one weekend, we are all free to love and jazz is free to be our music."

FESTIVAL WEEK always has this side-effect — bright programming at peninsula venues.

Barbara Murphy's Portofino Coffee House in Pacific Grove spotlights Monterey Vocal Jazz Ensemble on Thursday evening (9/20). There's a special urgency. This may be the tight unit's last gig.

THE MAN — Dizzy Gillespie will bring his trumpet and rich humor to the 33rd Monterey Jazz Festival. (Will Wallace photo.)

JE spokesperson Bill Allison, "and other responsibilities cut into time. I'm not nailing the door shut, and I'm not saying never again. For right now, it looks as though this idea may have run its course. I don't think anyone's sad. We hit some pretty high performance levels."

So Bill, Lauri, Peggy Nesbitt Brown and Lee Durley will preserve their sound and the arrangements by taping those Portofino sets. MVJE rendered sturdy service unto the vocal jazz scene round here — thanks.

(Bill says he has two new projects — a Youth Jazz Choir for Seaside's Oldemeyer Center and "an avant-garde vocal ensemble" at Robert Louis Stevenson School. The former includes "an historical overview of how jazz happened." And since the latter uses both student and adult voices, Peggy's a participant. The Oldemeyer group will present a public concert "by Christmas," Allison advises.)

Also on that Thursday night, the Sheraton's Monterey Bay Club will offer jazz vocalists Kitty Margolis and Madeline Eastman working together. Not only are these witty and talented women good friends — they're business partners in Mad-Kat Records. Madeline and Kitty have done such shows before, but never locally. Should be a free-wheeling, great occasion — Kitty invites musicians "to come on down and jam with us."

Other MBC bookings: Roger Eddy Band (9/21-22), Alan Berman (9/23), Don Pendergrass (9/24), Jack and Ed Show (9/25), fine quartet fronted by multiple saxist John Cortes (9/26).

Over at Kuumbwa Jazz Center of Santa Cruz, singer Ann Whittington "and friends" will concertize on Friday night (9/21). It's $5 per; ducats at door only.

Kuumbwa's big name for Monday evening (9/24) — jazz harmonica and guitar master Toots Thielemans plus backup players (his European band). Shows at 7:30 and 9:30; $13.50 apiece; Center Stage Ticketing.

Toots: "Jazz is a full-time musical and mental discipline. You can't play at jazz. I get my greatest satisfaction at the end of a good jazz set."

CHANGES: Madeline Eastman worked as a parttime media relations person at Yoshi's in Oakland before being laid off just recently. She confirms the street wire that the club will discontinue its national jazz policy at year's end. Owners blamed the economy and the big earthquake – "people still don't seem to go out as much."

Starting in January, then, Yoshi's will book dance units – Brazilian, salsa, R&B – along with local jazz players who'll work for a cut of the door charge.

Meanwhile, owner Kimball Allen of Kimball's (San Francisco) and Kimball's East (Emeryville) told me influential booker Chuck LaPaglia has left "for parts unknown." PR rep Ann Dyer quit to take a job with San Francisco Jazz Festival (formerly Jazz in the City). Chuck and Ann made Yoshi's into a jazz room and then signed on with Kimball.

"Our jazz policy will stay exactly the same," Allen said. He and wife Jane have a chain of highly successful health food stores as well.

SIGHT BITES: KAZU Public Radio's crew did a lot of taping and interviewing at the 1990 Monterey Bay Blues Festival. Result: three shows that will be aired next month (1-4 p.m. 10/24; 9-noon and 9-midnight 10/26).

– Ace Hill Quartet will cook Sunday (9/23) in the Monterey Plaza Hotel Jazz Series. Noon till four on the lower terrace. No cover; no minimum.

– KRML Jazz Radio offers some specials: Johnny Adams will wind up his Monterey Jazz Festival retrospective starting at four o'clock on Thursday and Friday afternoons (9/20-21). The valuable series began early this month and covered more than three decades.

Johnny will handle the remote broadcast from the fairgrounds arena on Sunday afternoon (9/23). That's the MJF student show with adult players guesting. Remote starts at one o'clock.

From 3-3:30 Saturday afternoon (9/22), Adams will interview Charles Veal. The composer and performer prepared a Sarah Vaughan tribute for the annual media breakfast hosted by MCI Communications.

On Thursday afternoon (9/20, 3-4), I'll do a survey of players from the fest student system who now work in the pro ranks.

And on Friday afternoon (9/21, 1-2), I'll celebrate the late composer and arranger Tadd Dameron. This show centers on a new album of his tunes – package issued by Quicksilver Records. Players thereon: Slide Hampton, Jimmy Heath, Kenny Barron, Ron Carter, Art Taylor.

Parenting workshops scheduled

Richard Atkinson, teacher and counselor to children and adults, will conduct a series of eight parenting workshops from 7 to 9 p.m. Wednesdays through Nov. 21 in the Thunderbird For Kids community room. Admission is $5. There will be no meeting on Halloween night, Oct. 31.

This Waldorf School approach to education will offer a foundation for the sutdy of child development and the evolution of consciousness. Each workshop will evolve from questions, seekings and challenges of parenting expressed by participants and will include an activity also formed from the group discussion.

Themes include the development of creative imagination in child and adult; the artistic approach to parenting and teaching; the world of the senses and the world of imitation in the child from birth to age 7; problem solving through artistic perception.

Atkinson has more than 28 years experience in individual and group counseling. He is currently a teacher and member of the board of directors of the Monterey Waldorf School.

Thunderbird for Kids is located in the Barnyard off Highway 1 and Carmel Valley Road. For more information call 624-4995.

The group invites women who are 18 years or older and love to sing to join their weekly practices beginning 9:30 a.m. Monday, Sept. 17.

The Choraleers perform throughout the Monterey Peninsula for benefits, churches and seasonal events. The group specializes in popular standards, folk music and show tunes.

The group meets at Hilltop Park Center, 871 Jessie St., Monterey. For more information, call 646-3975.
